Communism Dealt Blow By Voters in West Berlin

Turnout of 90.2 Pct. Is Record Breaker; Coalition to Stay As Socialists Lead

BERLIN (Monday), Dec. 4 (AP).—West Berlin voters defied Communist threats with a record-breaking 90.2 percent turnout in the municipal elections yesterday.

The voters favored the Socialists and backed their coalition city government for a new four-year term, complete unofficial returns showed today.

The Socialist Party of Mayor Ernst Reuter failed to match its 64-percent majority of 1948, but piled up a handy plurality to remain the dominant party. The Socialists got 44.59 percent of yesterday's vote. There was no conflict of issues between the parties. All were anti-Communist.

Coalition to Remain

The continued strength of the Christian Democrats and the Free Democrats prompted Reuter to comment that the old three-party coalition, that has steered West Berlin through the past two years of political crisis, would be retained.

On the basis of the unofficial count of total ballots cast—1,502,945 out of the 1,664,686 eligible voters—the turnout was 90.2 percent. This bettered the 86.3 percent participation in the 1948 elections when West Berliners, surrounded by the Soviet blockade and fed only by the Western Allied airlift, went to the polls to show the defiance of the Kremlin.

Unofficial Count

The complete unofficial count in the 1569 districts:

Total vote, 1,502,945.
Valid ballots, 1,462,057.
Invalid ballots, 40,888.
Socialists, 652,005 (44.59 percent).
Christian Democrats, 361,003 (24.69 percent).
Free Democrats, 337,322 (23.07 percent).
Conservatives, 12,006.
German Party, 53,884.
Refugee bloc, 31,904.
Independent Socialists, 9751.
Free Social Union, 4182.

The election bureau said an unofficial count showed 1,491,816 ballots cast in the 1569 districts. There were 1,664,686 eligible voters. This surpassed the 1949

D. C. Temperature Zooms Up to 70—Record for Date

The thermometer zoomed to 70 degrees yesterday, giving the District its warmest December 3 in weather history and filling the parks with basking citizens.

Previous high for the day was 68 degrees, recorded in 1932 and 1874.

Announcing that "summer is now over," the weatherman said the mercury will start the downward trek again today. From a morning high of 55, the temperature is due to drop to around 30 by midnight.

Post Ad Makes Early Morning Sale

Mrs. R. Levine was moving from College Park, Md., and wanted to sell her old refrigerator.

She followed her husband's suggestion and advertised it for sale in The Washington Post's classified columns. At 9:30 a. m. on the day the ad appeared, she sold the refrigerator—to the very first person who called!

Mrs. Levine was quite pleased with Post advertising, since the cost is so low, the response so rapid. And all she had to do to place the ad was call NAtional 4200 and ask for Classified.

If you have anything to sell, why don't you do the same?

Found After 10-Hour Search

Freight Train Kills Boy, 7, On His Way Home From Movie

A seven-year-old boy was killed Saturday on his way home from a movie when a freight train struck him as he ambled along the railroad tracks.

Second-grader Karl Flor, described by neighbors as "all boy," was the victim. He lived at 1508 Quarles st. ne.

His body was found after a 10-hour police search on the Deane avenue trestle, where, it is believed, he was trapped by a train bearing down on him in the darkness.

Not far from the body were two shiny objects which might attract a boy's eye: A vase and a lady's pocket mirror. Karl had a habit of picking things up along the railroad tracks and bringing them home to his mother, she said. She was convinced her son had gone after the vase and the mirror to bring home to her.

It was the second time within a week a boy had been killed by a train in the Washington area. The other victim was a 12-year-old Beltsville boy, struck last Sunday by a passenger train near his home.

A Multi-Million Dollar Setup

Detroit, Windsor Police Join In Border Gambling Raids

DETROIT, Dec. 3 (AP).—Detroit and Windsor police raided a number of alleged gambling establishments last night and shut down what one officer said was a multi-million-dollar gambling ring.

In an unusual show of United States-Canadian law enforcement cooperation, the police struck together at 18 alleged handbook and race result distribution centers in the two border cities.

Inspector Paul Slack, vice squad inspector who led the Detroit raids, said the places raided did an estimated 16 million-dollar annual business in horce-race betting, pools on sporting events and lotteries.

Authorities here arrested 75 persons, confiscating telephones, printing presses, and hundreds of thousands of lottery books and sport pool cards.

Deputy Detroit Police Superintendent Kennedy Lawrence said the raids crushed the nerve center of the bookie business in the metropolitan area.

"We believe this is the first time there has been an international crackdown in bookie information," Lawrence declared.

Capping two months of top secret conferences among officials of Detroit, Windsor, and Ontario provincial police, the raids padlocked 11 establishments named as

General Apathy

Slot Bill Given Faint Chance Of Passage

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Legislation to ban interstate shipment of slot machines appears at this time to have only the faintest chance of enactment during the Lame Duck session.

Although both the Senate and the House passed different versions of such a measure earlier this year, agreement in conference on the proposed law seems unlikely in the time remaining before convening of the Eighty-second Congress, in January.

Determined opposition of a single senator, plus apparent apathy by the other 95, including the members of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee, are the key factors.

The senator is George W. Malone (R., Nev.), the man who conducted a successful one-man, 11-hour-and-10-minute filibuster against the House version just before the election recess last September. He has indicated he's quite prepared to do it again, although he avoided the word filibuster.

The anti-slot machine bill grew out of the Attorney General's Crime Conference in Washington last February. At that meeting state and local law enforcement officers called for such a bill to help smash the multi-million dollar one-armed bandit racket. The Senate passed the bill unanimously without debate in April and the House in August approved it on a voice vote after rejecting, 166 to 10, a move to shelve it.

Senate-House conferees agreed to accept the House version of the bill and Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.), chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee which reported the bill originally, then attempted to win what normally would be routine Senate approval. At that point Malone stepped in, first to delay a vote, then to filibuster it to death in the rush for the election recess.

Egyptian Incense Yields Scent of 5000 Years Ago

EL QUATTA, Egypt, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—The ancient incense Cleopatra burned while Marc Anthony made love to her on the Nile smelled like rose and jasmine with a pinch of oriental perfume blended in.

The first "live" incense of old Egypt ever found—judged to be 5000 years old—burned with a blue-gray smoke in a fire here on the site of an Egyptian burial place that was begun at the dawn of history and was used up until the birth of Christ.

The discovery was made by Prof. Abdelhadi Hamada, general secretary of the Egyptian Department of Antiquities, and his assistant Shafik Farid.

During a tour of the tombs today, Hamda took a bit off one of the seven incense disks. Each about four inches in diameter. He put it on the fire and admitted he never smelled incense "more fragrant" in his life.

Three Men Killed in Accidents On Nearby Virginia Highways

First Lieut. Robert C. M. Ostland, 914 Jefferson st., Alexandria, was killed instantly last night when his convertible left the road and struck a tree on U. S. 1 at Hunting Creek near Alexandria.

Police said the car overturned and Ostland was thrown into the road. The car came to a stop at the edge of Hunting Creek. Ostland, who was stationed at Fort Belvoir, was pronounced dead at the scene.

Earlier in the day, a Washington Post circulation department employe and a Marine staff sergeant were killed in separate traffic accidents in Virginia.

Meredith L. Haste, 38, of Herndon, Va., died of a crushed chest when the front wheels of the truck he was using to deliver newspapers rolled over him on Route 28 in Herndon, Fairfax County, police said.

Fairfax County police said Haste was killed sometime between 6 and 7 a. m. It is thought he had left the truck to drop off a bundle of papers, when the

U. S. Delays Move In U. N. On Red China

Quit-Korea Demand On Peiping Believed Held Up for Talks By Truman, Attlee

FLUSHING, N. Y., Dec. 3 (U.P.).—The United States today postponed immediate plans to seek United States General Assembly action against the Chinese Communists, apparently to await outcome of the Truman-Attlee talks.

Meanwhile, Sir Benegal Rau, India's permanent delegate to the U. N. met again with Wu Hsiu-chuan, head of the Chinese Communist delegation, in an attempt to work out some way to ease the Korean war crisis.

Informed sources tonight said the West had decided to hold up introduction of a formal resolution demanding that Peiping pull its hordes of troops out of Korea.

Instead, the West plans merely to send a formal request on Monday to Assembly President Nasrollah Entezam of Iran that the issue of Chinese Communist intervention be put on the Assembly agenda.

Due in Assembly Today

It is expected that the request will come before the full Assembly at Monday morning's session, and go from there either to the general (steering) committee or direct to the main political committee.

Only yesterday, an American spokesman said the West would put forward a resolution at once calling on Peiping to withdraw its armies from the flaming Asiatic peninsula.

But the switch in plans apparently was decided on at an urgent Washington conference between Secretary of State Dean Acheson and United States Delegates Warren R. Austin and Ernest A. Gross.

The best guess here was that the step was taken to see what came out of the crucial conferences that will be held between President Truman and British Prime Minister Clement Attlee beginning Tuesday.

The United Nations today canceled a morning session of the Political Committee at which American Delegate John Foster Dulles had planned to "clear the decks" for quick Assembly action against Peiping.

Indications were that this was done to enable delegation chiefs to attend Assembly discussions here on the newly proposed agenda item concerning Chinese Communist aggression in Korea.

Cancellation Not Asked

An American spokesman said cancellation was not requested by the United States, but he did say that the United States delegation had been in touch with Entezam and with Secretary General Trygve Lie to make certain no legal difficulties would hold up quick action against Peiping when the West decided exactly what it wants done.

The United States delegation held urgent all-day conferences on the Far East crisis.

It was reported the United States was trying to get as many other nations as possible to co-sponsor the move putting Chinese intervention before the Assembly.

Bipartisan Group Given Late Briefing

Acheson Has Earlier Talk With Truman; President to Meet Attlee at Airport

By Donald J. Gonzalez
United Press Reporter

President Truman conferred with his top military and diplomatic leaders on the Korean crisis yesterday and top congressional leaders were summoned to the State Department to discuss "decisions which must be made over the next hours and days."

The extraordinary Sunday meetings preceded by a few hours the expected arrival of British Prime Minister Clement Attlee, who is due to land here at 9:30 a. m. (EST) today for talks with Mr. Truman that may decide whether World War III is imminent.

Covered "Whole Situation"

The President's meetings with Secretary of State Dean Acheson, Defense Secretary George C. Marshall and other top officials were shrouded in secrecy. The White House said only that they covered the "whole situation" on the Korean war and diplomatic fronts.

Presumably at Mr. Truman's suggestion, Democratic and Republican leaders of both houses were summoned to a State Department meeting at 9 last night.

Among the first arrivals were House Speaker Sam Rayburn, of Texas, and Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois.

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, was reached at Union Station as he arrived by train. He said he was told to rush to the State Department to confer about a "grave situation" in Korea.

Agree to Say Nothing

After the meeting, Rayburn told reporters: "We have not one word to say about our conference. That was our agreement."

However, a reporter asked an official who attended the meeting if the battle situation in Korea was "disastrous."

"I wouldn't say it was disastrous," he replied. "But we need unity the worst way now—the situation is serious." Neither he nor other lawmaker would discuss what "decisions" may be made.

The leaders met for about one hour and 25 minutes with Undersecretary of State James E. Webb, Assistant Secretary of State Jack K. McFall and Lieut. Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, Deputy Army Chief of staff.

A sergeant also was present. He carried a battle map of Korea.

Secretary of State Acheson did not attend the unusual briefing.

Senators Called Earlier

All available Democratic and Republican leaders of both houses, as well as the head men of both parties on the House Foreign Affairs Committee, were invited to the briefing.

They included House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska, Senate GOP whip Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, and Representatives

For 'Man-and-Man' Talks

'Soberly Optimistic' Attlee To Arrive Here This Morning

LONDON, Dec. 3, (U.P.).—Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee left by special plane for Washington tonight to urge President Truman in the name of all Western Europe to avoid formal war with Communist China at any cost and seek an agreement with Russia if possible.

Attlee left London Airport at 9:35 p. m. (4:35 p. m. EST) in the silver-and-white British Airways Stratocruiser Cathay after telling correspondents at the planeside:

"I am much looking forward to meeting with President Truman. It is almost exactly five years since I last saw him and it is high time for another meeting."

Attlee said he intended to survey the whole world situation with President Truman "in an exchange of views between man and man."

"I am always soberly optimistic," he said. "I hope and believe the talks will be successful."

As Attlee took off, diplomatic quarters reported that Prime Minister Nehru of India might make a sensational peace proposal to his Parliament Tuesday.

With Attlee were Field Marshal Sir William Slim, chief of the British Imperial General Staff; Sir Edwin Plowden, chief planning officer; Robert Hall, chief government economic adviser; R. H. Scott, Foreign Office Far Eastern expert, and other advisers.

(The Attlee party is expected to arrive at Washington's National Airport about 9:30 a. m. today.

Air Patrol Plane Crashes, Makes Maneuver Real

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Dec. 3 (Spl.).—Three Civil Air Patrol members from Norfolk were injured today when their plane crashed near the Orange County community of Unionville, 28 miles west of here. The three were participating in a CAP training maneuver.

Taken to the Quantico (Va.) Marine Base Hospital were Llewellyn Fischer, 27, the pilot; Miss Betty Lou Reynolds, 22, and Morris Worrell, 25. The hospital listed their condition as satisfactory but could not give descriptions of their injuries.

Members of Norfolk Squadron 3, they were en route from briefing at Richmond to search for a "planted" crash.

Their Piper Super-Cruiser nosed over on a farm near Unionville. Almost before nearby residents reported the crash to State police, CAP fliers on the mission spotted the wreck from the air.

300 Freezing GIs Saved By Marines

By Charles Moore

WITH FIRST MARINE DIVISION, Dec. 3 (U.P.).—A handful of Marines told today how they had rescued some 300 wounded, frostbitten GIs from the frozen surface of Changjin Reservoir and from huts along its edge.

The soldiers were survivors of a Communist ambush against a convoy of wounded. Most of them had crawled 2½ miles out on the ice from the southern tip of the reservoir.

"They were scattered over the ice almost as far as I could see," Lieut. Fred Van Brunt of Cucamonga, Calif., said. "It was the most horrible sight I've ever seen.

"Many were crying and hysterical. Some were sick and vomiting. Some had so many wounds you could hardly touch them.

"The Chinese would not shoot at the wounded on the ice, but they would shoot at us when we started toward them. We drew fire all the time and water would spurt three feet high when a bullet went through the ice.

"The men's hands were black, with frostbite. Some had no shoes. The Chinese had taken them. Some of those able to walk were so dazed they didn't know where they were and just walked in circles.

"Some of them were practically dismembered. One man had an eye shot away. It makes you want to cry to see our people shot up like that. All of them had been wounded before the Chinese hit them again in the convoy."

Some of the GIs had been in the open as long as five days.

Most of the men fled to the ice after the Reds ambushed the convoy of wounded Friday night. The Chinese riddled the trucks with submachine guns and grenades, overturned some and set others afire with the men in them.

Youth's Needs Are Our Needs, Ewing Tells 6000 at Parley

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

The "challenge of our troubled times" has been accepted by the men and women—nearly 6000 of them—who attended the opening session of the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth.

FSA Administrator Oscar R. Ewing, Conference chairman, told delegates they had accepted that challenge because "when we talk about children and their needs, we are also talking about ourselves—about the world we have helped to fashion and pass on to the sons and daughters of America."

Ewing said that the goal of the Conference—for each child a fair chance at a healthy personality—cannot be absolutely achieved.

Speaking in the National Guard Armory Ewing declared: "Human nature being the strange, God-given mixture that it is, no one of us—and no one of our children—will ever achieve a completely healthy personality. But we—and

40 Bombers To Help Free GIs Trapped In Northeast

Marines, Doughboys Try to Fight Way to Hambung Through Six Red Regiments

TOKYO (Monday), Dec. 4 (AP). — Outnumbered United Nations forces today began a mass withdrawal from Pyonggang to new positions south of the former North Korean capital.

The retreat of thousands of men and their equipment, including United States Eighth Army Headquarters, continued in northwest Korea. A protective force to the north still barred the approaching Chinese Communists from the city.

The United States Ninth Corps headquarters began moving south this morning. It was to be followed by the United States First Corps. Both planned to dig in along a new but as yet undisclosed defense line.

Path Blasted by Bombers

In northeast Kroea, 40 United States bombers began an all-day effort to blast a path through six Chinese Red regiments for trapped Marines and infantrymen to make their way back 50 miles to Hamhung.

Two United States Marine regiments today broke out of a five-day trap on the west side of the Changjin Reservoir, taking heavy losses, they ended a bloody 12-mile retreat to Hagaru at the south tip of the reservoir.

There they joined other Marines of the First Division and also elements of two United States Seventh Division regiments who had fought out of a similar trap on the east side.

But there was more trouble ahead. Six Chinese regiments were in mountain positions on both sides of the road for six miles south of Hagaru.

Maj. Gen. Earl E. Partridge ordered 40 B-26 light bombers of his Fifth Air Force to clear the way.

Partridge instructed that "every enemy ridge, every enemy road and every enemy position be hit and hit hard."

Hounded by Six Divisions

An Air Force spokesman said the Reds were dug in along a twisting mountainous road running south of the reservoir. The

Israel, Jordan Ordered by U. N. To 'Cease Fire'

JERUSALEM, Dec. 3 (AP).—The United Nations Armistice Commission today ordered both Israel and Jordan to cease fire and withdraw their forces from a disputed road in the Negev desert following an armed clash there this morning.

Two Arab Legion armored cars were knocked out by Israeli guns and left burning, the commission reported. An Israeli military spokesman said the Jordan force opened fire on an Israeli patrol moving along the road north of Ezion-Geber (Elath) in the desert.

He said the Israeli force returned the fire in accordance with previous instructions and registered direct hits on the Legion cars. Tension began to heighten last Thursday when Israel accused Jordan of setting up a roadblock on the highway which leads to the south region on the Gulf of Aqaba.

MacArthur Meets Collins For Korea War Talks

TOKYO (Monday), Dec. 4 (AP).—Gen. J. Lawton Collins, United States Army Chief of Staff, arrived in Tokyo today for a series of conferences with General MacArthur and other officers in the Far East command.

General MacArthur and members of his staff met them at the airfield.

"Hello, Joe, welcome to Tokyo," he said, throwing an arm about Collins' shoulders.

Two Doctors Here Refuse Commissions

Two District doctors who turned thumbs down on Army commissions may have thumbed a ride on the gravy train.

Under the recent law to draft doctors and dentists educated at Government expense, and who gave no military service in return, those who volunteer will receive commissions and the $100-a-month bonus which goes with Medical Corps rank. Those who do not volunteer may be drafted anyway but are to be paid according to their rank, without the bonus.

In the District only two of 25 doctors eligible for draft under the law have definitely and flatly refused to accept commissions. About half of the 25 have agreed to serve if called and the rest are in various stages of processing.

Now it appears that the District's quota, estimated at 10 doctors, will be filled from those who have signified their willingness to serve. That will leave the two free as air until the local Selective Service works out some method of dealing with them. This is expected to require at least two months, and possibly more.

Second Army has reported that papers of 40 physicians and dentists in its eight-State area, who have been classified 1-A and undergone physical examination, have reached its Fort George G. Meade headquarters. Of these, 25 have been cleared for commissions.

Action-Packed Afternoon for Draft Board 6

The Washington Post

SELECTING FOR SERVICE—Studying a case are the members of Draft Board No. 6, from left, Charles H. Cooke, Miss Mary R. Cole, clerk of the board; William M. Murray; Leo A. Rover, the board's chairman; Earl D. Thompson and George G. Jefferson

By Gershon Fishbein
Post Reporter

Five members of Draft Board 6 met last week, only a few hours after President Truman's statements in answer to questions about possible use of the atomic bomb and expansion of the armed forces.

They were average citizens, undistinguished by rank or title. Yet, as they met, they felt keenly the weight of the President's words and knew full well that busier, more important days were in store for them.

Draft Board 6 is a typical group, representative of the Brookland - Woodridge - Michigan Park community it serves. Its members have in common the experience of draft board service in World War II. They know the score.

Works in Obscurity

A draft board member is almost an oddity in our society. He receives no pay for his service. In common with the weatherman, he is frequently the butt of bad jokes. Nor can it be said that he receives any personal publicity from his service; for the most part he labors in obscurity.

Of the five members of Board 6, only its chairman, Leo A. Rover, can lay claim to distinction. He has served, in dazzling conjunction, such posts as United States Attorney for the District, Assistant District Attorney, member of the Parole Board and other high-ranking positions in the legal profession. He successfully prosecuted Gaston B. Means for the $100,000 swindle of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean. His next big case will be the defense of Oscar Collazo, charged with the murder of a Blair House police guard in the November 1 assassination plot.

The other members of the board include George G. Jefferson, attorney; William M. Murray, president of Murray & Heister, paper products company; Earl D. Thompson, vice president of B. F. Saul, real estate company, and Charles H. Cooke, sales manager of Judd & Detweiler, printers. The clerk is Miss Mary R. Cole.

The board members arrive one by one. It is 4 p. m. and each must take time off from business, as they have been doing for the past year and all through World War II. Miss Cole has prepared in advance the folders on each registrant so the members can get right to work on their arrival.

Let us sit in on this meeting to see how this typical draft board decides the fate of the young men in its community. Here we may see in action a necessary, if unpleasant force, called and recalled to aid America in time of stress.

Wants Role in Wedding

The first registrant, Chairman Rover announces, is a young man of 22 who has received notice of induction for December 13. In his letter the young man says he supports his entire family but also admits he has two brothers of working age and a sister at home.

He is a student at Wilson Teachers College and incloses a letter to that effect from the registrar. The question now arises, Rover says, should he be given a deferment to continue his studies. Rover suggests they consult the regulations to determine the youth's exact legal rights.

While they call for the regulations, Rover notes in the letter that the sister is getting married and wants the registrant to give her away in the ceremony, the father being dead.

Jefferson looks rather stern at this. "Look," he says, "we've got to fight a war whether he gives her away or not." Then, he adds, without a suggestion of a smile, "I suggest the board chairman give the bride away."

Student Deferred

Rover takes this in stride. "I want to see what kind of wedding reception it is first," he answers.

By this time Miss Cole has arrived with the regulations and the laughter has died down. Thompson consults the manual and determines that as a student he is entitled to a deferment. He so informs the other members.

Says Rover: "Induction postponed to February 1."

The next registrant is a part-time student of physical education at Colorado A. & M. He too has been ordered up for induction December 13 and seeks deferment on the ground of financial loss and hardship. He says he has two brothers at home of working age.

Murray suggests the soldiers' dependency allotment could help take care of the family. There is some discussion but the members finally agree with this view and he (the young man) is continued 1-A.

Essential Doctors

Now Miss Cole brings in the folders of more registrants.

These are young doctors and dentists seeking deferments. Each case was accompanied by a letter from the Medical and Dental Advisory Committee declaring the individual essential to the community. Here there was no doubt about the regulation.

"Two-A until July, 1951?" asked Rover. And everyone chorused "2-A."

The board then returned to consideration of students. Thompson confessed he was a bit puzzled. Are we sure, he asked, that we have the discretion to defer students for a semester or a year as we see fit?

Rover and Cooke said they were a little doubtful on this point too. Murray pointed out that in the case of seniors it would certainly be unfair to defer them only until February and everybody agreed on that.

Jefferson suggested the board write on the folders of doubtful cases, "Do not induct prior to February 1, 1951." Rover thought that would result in duplication of their action later.

Deferred by Good Marks

A junior at the University of Maryland asked deferment as a student and pointed out that he was in the upper third of his class. This question of scholastic standing split the discussion wide open, especially when Rover remarked that he was the first student to disclose his standing.

Thompson now noted that the regulation clearly stated the student must be in the upper half of his class to be entitled to deferment. Clearly, the board agreed, it was mandatory to grant students deferments in such cases.

This problem out of the way, the rest of the cases moved smoothly. A senior at Washington and Lee University was given a year's deferment to be allowed to graduate. Another student with poor grades was denied deferment.

Short Shrift for Doctor

A doctor, unmarried, not in school.

Rover: "1-A, gentlemen?"

Board, in chorus, "1-A."

A stock clerk, unmarried, with no reference to school in his letter.

Rover: "1-A, Gentlemen?"

Board, in unison: "1-A."

A junior student asks deferment so he can finish his "coarse."

Says Jefferson: "Looks risky. I don't think he'll make it."

One registrant didn't think he'd make a good soldier. "I get infections very easily," his letter said. 1-A.

Another confessed he had quite a record. Larceny, bad teeth, tricky ankle.

The answer was rather specific. 1-A.

South Korean War Toll Put at Near Million

SEOUL, Korea, Dec. 3 (AP).—Defense Minister Sihn Sung Mo, estimating nearly one million South Korean soldiers, police and civilians have died in the war against communism, told a news conference today his people would fight "to the last man to the last minute."

He did not disclose how he arrived at his estimate of deaths or what period it covered. Last week President Syngman Rhee gave an offhand estimate of 100,000 military and 200,000 civilian deaths, but no authoritative figures on South Korean casualties are available.

Area Marine Killed in Action

The youngest brother of a family of Marine veterans—four boys and one girl served in World War II—has been killed in action in Korea.

Pfc. Bernard Ulrich, 21, of 6112 42d place, Hyattsville, Md., previously reported missing in action on August 13, is now known to be dead, the Department of Defense announced.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Stavely, had received one letter from the youth—on his way to Korea in early July.

Born in Springfield, Pa., Pfc. Stavely attended school at Hyattsville graduating in 1948 from Hyattsville High School. He was a member of the soccer and basketball teams.

Three months after graduation, he enlisted in the Marines, received basic training at Parris Island, S. C., and was sent to Hawthorne, Nev. His last visit home was at Easter time. Then he returned to Nevada and left for overseas duty in July.

Besides his parents, he is survived by two sisters, Charlotte of New York, formerly with the Marine Corps Women's Reserve, and Theresa, a student nurse in Baltimore; and by four brothers, Grant, a Marine at Camp Lejeune; John of Riverdale, Md.; Robert A. of 120 Irvington st. sw., and Harry W. jr., of Littlestown, Pa.

Allies Withdrawing South of Pyongyang

B-26s planned to bomb the Red positions all through the day.

Six Chinese divisions hounded both the cut-off Marines and United States Infantrymen who were on the east side of the reservoir.

At times the temperature dropped to 27 degrees below zero.

American casualties were high. Qualified senior officers called the entire northeast situation critical.

On the northwestern front, Chinese artillery roared into action, heavy Red reinforcements were on the move, and spearheads probed only 18 to 20 miles northeast of Pyongyang.

Abandonment of Pyongyang seemed imminent as the United States Eighth Army hastened the tempo of its retreat toward the thirty-eighth parallel.

The former Korean Communist capital of 300,000 uneasily awaited the return of its former masters.

The heaviest fighting, however, was under way in the Changjin Reservoir sector, some 35 miles northwest of the east coast industrial center of Hamhung.

Associated Press Correspondent Jack Macbeth reported powerful Chinese Communist forces were massing for a drive to the twin cities of Hamhung and Hungnam. A United States Tenth Corps intelligence officer said some Reds have been observed within 15 miles of Hamhung. Other Chinese buildups were in progress within a 35-mile radius of the city.

"Quite a Few Men" Lost

If Hamhung should fall, it would further enmesh the trapped United States First Marine Division and two regiments of the United States Seventh Division who are consolidating remnants of their forces now at Hagaru on the south tip of the frozen Changjin Reservoir.

Maj. Gen. David G. Barr, commander of the Seventh Division, told AP Correspondent Tom Stone, "We lost quite a few men and much equipment."

"But even though our men were cut off," Barr said, "they never did quit fighting."

Barr said small elements of the Thirty-first and Thirty-second Regiments of the division "fought their way heroically through vastly superior numbers in some of the worst fighting conditions imaginable."

Colonel Optimistic

There were no late reports on the trapped Fifth and Seventh Marine Regiments. Some of the Seventh reached Hagaru Saturday, and lead elements of the Fifth Regiment were nearing the town as night fell.

One Marine colonel told Correspondent Macbeth, "We know we are surrounded. We know we have taken a beating and will take still more; but we think we can get ourselves out of this mess."

If the Marines can pull out of the Chinese trap they will have to fight their way southward into Hagaru, through it and then through some three Chinese regiments lined up for six miles on either side of a mountainous pass between Habaru and Koto.

At Koto they would then meet other formidable Red forces blocking the 30-mile road to the Hamhung-Hungnam area.

A hint of the number of casualties suffered in the frigid reservoir battle was provided by Far East Air Forces headquarters. It said 1200 wounded doughboys and Marines had been flown out of Hagaru in two days.

Regiment Called Back

The operation was regarded one of the "most daring" of the Korean war. Eleven unarmed transport planes made the mercy flights through Red fire to land on a pasture used as an emergency airfield.

General MacArthur's war summary of Sunday afternoon—frequently lagging behind battlefront developments — said Marine elements were making "slow progress" in their retirement toward Hagaru against fierce opposition.

Eighty air miles farther north, the Seventeenth Regimental Combat team of Barr's Seventh Division received orders to pull back from the Manchurian border. The Seventeenth had established a 10-mile-wide foothold on the south bank of the Yalu River around Hyesanjin November 21.

Presumably the Korean Republican Capital Division, last reported pressing northward along the east coastal road toward Soviet Siberia, also will be recalled.

The Chinese threat to Hamhung and to the big United States east coast base at Wonsan on the narrow neck of Korea endangered the entire command of the United States Tenth Corps.

The Chinese pushed elements of the United States Third Division out of Huksu, 26 air miles northwest of Hamhung, on Saturday.

Flights of Marine Corsairs and Air Force fighters returned to Huksu Sunday and "wiped it off the map," in a concerted four-hour air attack, pilots said.

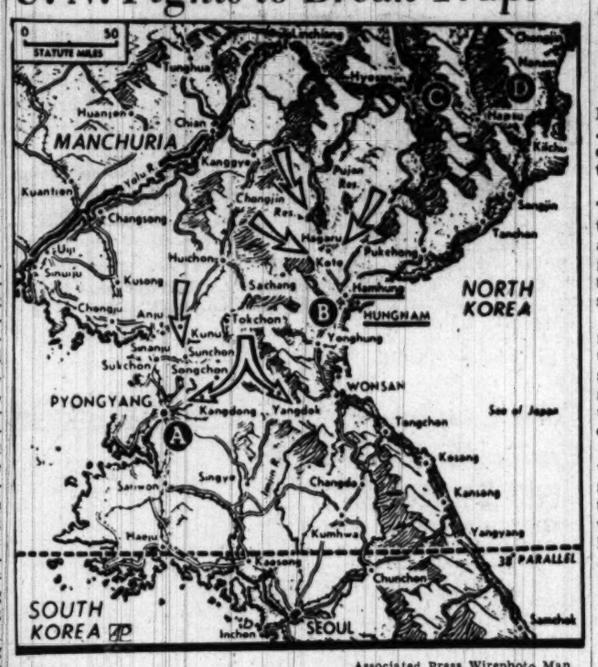

Planes also slaughtered more than 100 horses believed used by Chinese cavalrymen and to haul military supplies over the snowy ranges adjoining the Changjin Reservoir.

On the northwestern front, there was little contact with massive Chinese forces building up for the assault on Pyongyang, except on the extreme right end of the line.

There, United States First Cavalry Division troops, supported by British Twenty-ninth Brigade troops, skirmished with powerful Red elements near Songchon, 30 miles northeast of Pyongyang.

Allied forces continued to fall back across a line running from Sukchon, 27 miles north of Pyongyang, east to Sunchon and southeast to the Songchon area.

BY CHINA REDS—At Pyongyang (A) the Allies sped retreat moves as the Reds moved down from the north, sending spearheads as far as Kangdong on the northeast. Other arm of this twin drive was aimed at Wonsan, on the east coast. Heaviest battles were in the Changjin reservoir area (B) as Americans fought their way south and the Reds massed for an attack on Hamhung and Hungnam (underlined). Yanks at the Yalu River (C) were ordered to pull back and South Korean units along the east coast (D) were expected to be recalled southward elections when 86.3 percent of West Berlin, surrounded by the Soviet blockade and fed only by the Western Allies' airlift, trooped to the polls to show defiance of the Kremlin.

Berlin Vote Hits Communism

The election was conducted without serious disturbance. Last week police arrested 303 Communist agitators trying to work up boycott fever in West Berlin.

Mayor Reuter called the turnout at the polls "a great success." He added that "more important than the details of the forthcoming result is the fact that Communist influence has dwindled to even less than before. This turnout must make an impression upon the whole world."

Reds Quieted for Time Being

The outcome quieted the Reds for the time being. Earlier the Communist radio had trumpeted that few western Berliners were voting and that they were being virtually dragged to the polls by the western Allies. This ignored the fact that the western powers made the polling places "off limits" for their personnel throughout the day. But late tonight the Communist radio had nothing to say.

After making sure that his party had attained a solid plurality, Reuter said he thought the Socialist-Christian Democrat-Free Democrat coalition that guided West Berlin through the Soviet blockade crisis would continue.

"I take it that the parties which up to now have worked together in Berlin will be found working together in the future," he said.

His statement was approved by Dr. Ferdinand Fridensburg, Christian Democrat leader and deputy mayor under the coalition.

The Socialist decision to avoid a clear-cut battle with other parties for sole control appears to be a typically Berlin approach to a practical problem, since the Berliner sees the Communist as his only opponent.

Reds' Foes Spurred

The high percentage of participation was a shot in the arm for anti-Communist German leaders, who had urged all citizens to remember that "if you don't vote, you vote for communism."

Voting was heaviest in the working-class districts near the Soviet-occupied sector. In the Tempelhof district, where an American air base is situated, participation soared to a record 94 percent. In the United States election of 1950, less than 60 percent of the eligibles voted, according to best estimates.

Anywhere else in the world the election would have meant nothing more than selection of a city government.

Here it meant voting for the West and its drive to stop Communist aggression or abstaining for the East in hopes of collaborating with Russian expansion.

Morse Urges Use of A-Bomb Only on Russia

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.) said yesterday the atomic bomb was not an answer to military needs in Korea, but if there is no hope of a negotiated peace "we might drop it some place."

Asked if he meant we might have to drop the bomb on Russia, Morse replied: "Of course, on Russia."

Speaking on the NBC television program, "Meet the Press," Morse said the United States has "a relatively few days" to decide whether there is any hope of negotiating peace with Russia.

He said he believed this country should "make clear to China that we consider her only a satellite of Russia" and if Russia will not take part in real peace talks, the United States should "declare Russia an aggressor."

"In a very real sense we are already at war with Russia," Morse said.

"I would have my Government make it very clear to the United Nations that we want a decision within the next few days.

"We can't stand by and let thousands of American soldiers be killed—really with Russian bullets."

Morse said this country's first step should be to "make a friendly suggestion to the Russian delegates, both in the Security Council and in the General Assembly, to sit down and frankly discuss the world situation."

He said he suspected that the Russian delegates would not do so, and it would then be time for the United States to declare Russia an aggressor.

He said he thought the President should "take to the radio" and give the people the real facts about Russian strength.

He declared that in his work on the Senate Armed Services Committee, there were "a good many things we were told to keep top secret" which he believed should be disclosed to the people.

O'Conor Probe Set on Rubber Shipments

Chairman Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) disclosed yesterday his Senate Commerce subcommittee will investigate the shipment of at least 10,500,000 pounds of rubber tires and tubes to Communist China since outbreak of the Korean war.

O'Conor, whose subcommittee has been looking into shipments of strategic materials to Communist areas, said the rubber has been listed as "scrap" or "old" rubber but that it undoubtedly is being used by the Reds in their war in Korea.

The Commerce Department Saturday night slapped new and tighter controls on shipments of strategic materials to Communist dominated countries, including Red China. It also ordered the licensing of all exports to Soviet satellites in Asia.

The new regulations were announced, effective at midnight Saturday, after O'Conor asked the Department to halt a shipment of silicon steel sheets to China.

He said in a statement that "increasingly" large shipments of rubber products have gone to China since the Communists took control in September, 1949. He said the shipments, have "jumped" since the Korean war.

He said West Coast authorities announced they were going to "slash" the tires and tubes to make sure they could not be used again. But he asserted the only way to make sure the rubber is not "used against our forces" is to prevent its shipment.

He reported that a 41,300-pound shipment of "defective scrap rubber air brake hose" recently left Baltimore for Tientsin, China.

"How 'defective' this hose was no one can say now, for apparently no expert examined it to see how defective it was," he said.

Top Advisers Are Called In

Laurie C. Battle (D., Ala.) and John M. Vorys (R., Ohio) the highest-ranking available members of the House committee.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Commitee and Senator Alexander Wiley (R., Wisc.) the Senate group's top-ranking minority member, went to the department separately earlier in the day.

Both were extremely close-mouthed about what they were told. Connally said "the military situation was reviewed." Wiley said the talks showed that "the world situation was very critical due to the situation in Korea."

A high Administration official, whose name cannot be disclosed, said the lawmakers were called in to prepare them for "discussions which must be made over the next hours and days."

He gave no hint of the nature of the decisions faced, but said it was urgent for the people to realize the "full gravity of the situation we face."

Diplomats made no effort to disguise their grim attitude toward the deteriorating situation in Korea and the need for what they termed "real national unity" in the days ahead.

The nature of the meetings, including presence of such sharp Administration foreign policy critics as Wherry, indicated a strong effort by the President to forge firm bipartisan support for whatever "decisions" must be made.

While there was no hint as to the exact nature of the decisions facing the Nation's leaders, military officials said as late as last Friday there is no intention of evacuating Korea entirely, or even withdrawing behind the 38th Parallel.

It was expected the State Department conferences would discuss the forthcoming Attlee-Truman talks. It also was indicated new moves the United States contemplates in the United Nations would be gone over.

Dispatches from Flushing, N. Y., said the United States delegation at the U. N. had postponed immediate plans to seek General Assembly action against Communist China, apparently to await the outcome of the round of high-level talks here.

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said Mr. Truman will greet the British Prime Minister personally when he arrives at National Airport.

Conferring with Mr. Truman Saturday night and again yesterday were Secretary of State Acheson, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Defense Secretary George C. Marshall.

High quarters said the United States would offer a resolution asking the U. N. General Assembly to order a withdrawal of Chinese troops from Korea, and that the United States, in turn would guarantee the integrity of China's borders.

Another presidential conferee was W. Averell Harriman, Mr. Truman's special adviser on foreign affairs.

State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said Acheson went to the Defense Department yesterday morning before his meeting at Blair House with the President.

The Truman-Attlee talks will begin Tuesday, Ross said, although they may meet informally late today.

Ross said completion of arrangements for the meetings with Attlee would await the Prime Minister's arrival.

80,000 Red Candidates Are Approved in Romania

VIENNA, Dec. 3 (AP).—Romania's voters, under the watch of secret police and Russian troops, gave rubber-stamp approval at the polls today to 80,000 Communist candidates for several thousand local councils.

The councils, extending from regional to rural bodies, will strengthen Communist control over southeast Europe's largest agricultural and oil-producing state, western experts in Vienna say.

Pravda Sees Only Lunatics Believing Truman Peace Talks

MOSCOW, Dec. 3 (AP).—Pravda sharply assailed President Truman today, asking: "Who but lunatics can believe in the peaceful intentions of Truman and his friends?"

A front-page editorial in the Communist Party organ was based on the President's news conference last Thursday but it made no mention of his remarks about the atom bomb.

"Truman needs war and not peace," the newspaper declared.

The editorial began by saying that Mr. Truman's official statement in connection with the latest events in Korea repeated that the Government of the United States does not intend to abandon "its mission" in Korea, "but on the contrary, promised to expand still further the American Army and to continue the United States imperialists machinations in Korea and towards China as well."

"It is well known," Pravda said, "that all proposals of the democratic government of Korea and the Peoples' (Communist) government of China directed towards the peaceful settlement of the Korean question have been incessantly and sharply rejected by Truman.

"Why did Truman turn down the peaceful proposals of the Koreans and the Chinese, if in fact, he strives for peace?

"Truman accused the Koreans and Chinese of 'aggression.' This can only arouse a smile. Was it the Koreans or the Chinese who attacked the United States? Is it not United States troops that are in Korea and on Taiwan (Formosa)? Who is the agressor there if not Truman and his friends MacArthur, Harriman and others?"

The editorial asked a the conclusion why China, bordering on Korea, does not "have the right to defend its boundaries, while the United States, which is 5000 miles away from Korea, has the right to 'defend its security' to the extent of 5000 miles from its borders?"

Nations Urged To Stop Slurs

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 3 (AP). Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, often named as a possible mediator in the growing East-West crisis, urged all nations today to stop running each other down and to try a new approach to peace.

Addressing the All-India Newspaper Editors' Conference here, the Indian leader outlined the three general steps he considers necessary to bring peace to the world:

Stop "this business of running each other down and try to find some way of stopping the rot."

Consider problems in a new atmosphere and try to find a temporary solution.

Then seek a solution of longer duration.

Everything at Steak!

By Albert Parchey Mesirow

As connoisseurs of the good things in life we Americans seem to be maturing rapidly. You rarely hear, nowadays, the once prevalent and entirely specious contention that drinking wine with meals is a "foreign" custom and in an American, an affectation. That argument never had any validity, anyhow. Most Americans are of European descent, and are susceptible to the national preferences of their forebears. Those of English extraction, for instance, seem to like rich sherries and ports. Descendants of Germans go for the lighter Rhenish-type wines. And people of Latin extraction prefer full-bodied vintages like Burgundy or Chianti. So it goes through all the list of our individual heritages. Strangely enough, most of the western European wines of today are pressed from grapes native to America. When a blight killed nearly all the vines west of Hungary in the middle of the last century, hardy, disease-resisting vines from California replaced them. In time, soil and climate worked their changes, and now there is considerable difference in flavor between American and European wines. But coming from the same original stock, they are basically the same. On the other hand, we Americans, though coming from a hundred different stocks, have become pretty much one in our essential characteristics. This little paradox explains in part why Nature is always referred to as "she". Inconsistency is, after all, a feminine characteristic, isn't it?

When you mention "Mt. Vernon" to a true Baltimorean, he reacts differently from other Americans. He doesn't think of George Washington's homestead. He thinks first of Mt. Vernon Place and then of Mt. Vernon whiskey. For the Mt. Vernon distillery has for generations been one of Baltimore's most famous landmarks. From the first, its products have epitomized the best in Maryland's traditionally fine distillations. Today, Mt. Vernon whiskey is finer than ever. When you order a Manhattan or an Old Fashioned at Parchey's, it's made of Mt. Vernon unless you specifically designate otherwise. Luther and Al, our day and night Mixologists, assure me that this choice of whiskey is one of the principal factors in the popularity of these great cocktails. While I agree heartily, I also suspect that skill in mixing has a good deal to do with it. Just try one on your way home tonight. Either an Old Fashioned or a Manhattan costs only fifty cents, a fact that is as sure to warm the cockles of your pocket-book as the cocktail warms your drooping spirits! Our address: 19th at K Sts. NW.

I seem to have been babbling along about your thirst without ever a thought to your hunger. So let me remind you that (to my mind) our filets mignon are the world's most delectable food. I've already told you how we cut these filets ourselves from the finest prime beef. How we dip yours in a delicately-flavored searing sauce to seal in the rich, natural juices; how we plunge it under the flame and broil it to your exact specification; how it's served to you under a blanket of rich fresh-mushroom sauce, laced with fine wine; how the touch of your knife to the meat releases its imprisoned juices and sends them cascading in a ruddy stream of golden-flaked globules; how each succulent, juice-filled bite seems to melt in your eager mouth! All these things I've written of many, many times. But I never tire of the telling, and I'm sure that you will never tire of the superb eating of our butter-tender, mouth-watering filets! Why don't you come in this evening and enjoy one? We're located at 19th and K Sts., NW.

Youth Parley Hears Ewing

they—can strive for it. And the striving is in itself the essence of what it takes to face up to life in these hard mid-century years—or in any time or place of past or future history."

Ewing pointed out pitfalls which might beset conference objectives—overprotection, over indulgence, squalor, bad housing, illness, ignorance, prejudice, discrimination, "educational malnutrition," or shoddy moral standards that deny to youth any spiritual foundation for life."

The FSA administrator said the prime significance of the conference is "as a prelude to action." He added:

"If we can translate our convictions into action; if we do what we know needs to be done and should be done—in our homes, our schools, our churches, our health centers and our communities—then we will have given our children their opportunity to achieve for themselves the mental and moral health which is their birthright."

Mrs. Truman got a warm round of applause when introduced by Ewing. He described her as "a well-known mother, a distinguished citizen and the first lady of the United States."

Dr. Buttrick Precedes Ewing

Dr. George A. Butterick, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York City, preceded Ewing in the opening conference session.

He told delegates that the Mid-century conference "may be the music that shall save our world."

"While other men plot success, you plot a world in which children may live the creative life. While nations prepare for war, you prepare for a children's peace.

"While other adults are selfish, you surrender time and thought for childhood's sake. You are a portent of hope, a sign of new courage."

Ewing disclosed in the address that the 1950 census shows one person in three in the United States is under 21. Ewing said children — all persons under 21 — number 53,932,000. The population of the United States is 150,697,000. By sex, boys outnumber girls slightly. The census shows 50.4 percent of the population under 21 are boys.

Chose Work Panels

During the day-long registration period before actual conference proceedings began, delegates from the 48 States and Territories filed through long lines to sign up and chose the panels and groups with which they will work.

Melvin A. Glasser, conference director, said that persons were "stacked up three deep" in one Armory room trying to gain admission to the conference proceedings, even though they had not been invited.

He said they included people from Michigan, Louisiana, Connecticut, members of State work groups which planned the conference.

Glasser said another surprise to those who had planned the conference was the insistence of more than 500 persons that they be permited to join work group 35. Glasser said planners had thought about 100 persons would want to join in that phase of the conference proceeding. The group will discuss what can be done at national, State and local levels to put the conference's suggestions into practice.

Delegates to previous White House Conferences on Youth found the sight of so many young people one of the more unusual conference features. It is the first time youth has been permitted to participate in a White House conference concerning its problems.

Arnulf M. Pins, of Paterson, N. J., chairman of the Youth Advisory Council to the Conference, pointed out that working together with adults is "the only way to learn our problems, and theirs."

Margot Cassel, of New York City, another Council member, said youth wants to go to the workshops, not as "cliques," but on an equal footing with adults, to try to meet the many-sided conference aims.

All the delegates had their own ideas about the most crucial problem which the conferees will discuss.

'Imitating Confusion'

Eloi Daigle, a principal of a Madawaska, Me., school, said youth's most critical problem "is their failure to think for themselves; they try to imimtate the confusion of the adult generation."

Nebraska State Senator Dwight W. Burney laid it to the military service, which he said is "disrupting the thinking" of youth. "There is a danger of a don't care attitude entering in and breaking down the normal of forward looking, good behavior. I'm afraid no one has the answer."

A Baltimore, Ohio, pastor, George Crenshaw, said that life today "has no meaning on the immediate level. The most critical problem is a family and a community which do not make sense."

Iowa Judge R. Kent Martin pointed to the fact that "Monumental changes are taking place in our mode of living. There must be an adjustment of adults and children to this change. This realization must be by adults as a whole, not parents alone, coupled with the realization that all children are the responsibility of all adults.

Daily Worker Ban Vote Awaits Court Action

NEW YARK, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—New York newsdealers today postponed their vote on whether or not to ban the Communist newspaper Daily Worker from their newstands.

The vote was postponed because of a New York County Supreme Court hearing at 10 a. m. Monday, at which the Daily Worker will seek an injunction prohibiting the proposed ban. The newspaper contends that such action would be a "criminal conspiracy" against freedom of the press.

More Than 100 Exhibits Attract Delegates

In the vast hall of the National Guard Armory, delegates to the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth yesterday scurried through their registration, then stopped to look at more than 100 exhibits.

The exhibits, in equi-sized booths, take up half the floor space of the Armory and treat every subject involving children.

In the booth prepared by Florida, a jovial man was handing out fresh oranges and simultaneously expounding on Florida's contribution to its children.

The Hawaii booth was a miniature theater, with films of the beauties of the Pacific isle.

To one side was a huge exhibit from the National Art Education Association on a child's growth through artistic expression.

An explanation accompanying one group of paintings read: "Children play for the play sake, transferring a pencil into an airplane. If adults would do this they would be considered insane. The child's drawing also is uncontrolled. The adolescent becomes critically aware of his creative product."

The National Association for Mental Health was exhibiting a series of comic cartoons concerning the family of Blondie and Dagwood. The pups, which are a part of the family, were being enjoined by their mother, Daisy: "Everybody wants love. Yes, and everybody needs appreciation. One way to show love is by showing appreciation. It surely makes life a lot pleasanter."

Hadassah's exhibit was a group of colored slides showing life in the new Israel.

There was a huge scroll from the American Federation of Teachers (AF of L) depicting "A charter of the rights of the child."

Some of the exhibits were simply the enunciation of goals: "Eliminate harmful child labor; ensure family security; promote job preparation" was one.

Ford Employes Under $675 Month Get 3 Pct. Raise

DETROIT, Dec. 3 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. yesterday granted a 3 percent raise effective December 16 to salaried employes earning less than $675 a month.

Henry Ford 2d, president of the company, also disclosed the auto firm has decided on automatic salary increases annually for its white-collar workers earning $650 a month or less.

Beginning June 1, 1951, such employes will get an annual increase of 3 percent or $7 a month, whichever is greater. The salary improvement program will continue through June 1, 1954, for employes not covered by union agreements.

The company also announced additional benefits in its group insurance program for salaried employes.

truck started to roll backwards down a small incline. Haste apparently tried to jump into the truck, lost his balance and fell under the front wheels, police said. There were no witnesses to the accident. Dr. Emanuel Newman, Fairfax County coroner, issued a certificate of accidental death due to a crushed chest.

Haste had worked for The Washington Post as a distributor and motor route dealer in Fairfax County for three years.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sarah Haste, a social worker at George Washington University Hospital; two children, Sally, 13, and Joel, 11; his mother, Mrs. Lucy Yates Haste, of Biloxi, Miss., and three brothers, Edward Haste of Biloxi, Joseph Haste of Washington, and Thomas Haste of the Panama Canal Zone.

Funeral services will be Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the Reed Funeral Home in Herndon. Burial will be in Chestnut Grove Cemetery there.

Staff Sergt. John William Stein, 27, stationed at Quantico, Va., was killed instantly when he was thrown from his car after it crashed into a tree off Route 692, a mile east of Triangle, Prince William County, Marine officials reported.

MEREDITH L. HASTE
. . . Crushed to death by truck

Sergeant Stein, attached to the Headquarters Battalion, Marine Corps School at Quantico, apparently lost control of his car on a curve, Marine officials said.

Five persons were seriously injured in a two-car collision on U. S. 1 at Buttermilk Hill near Waterloo, Md., shortly before noon yesterday.

Admitted to St. Agnes Hospital in Baltimore with head injuries and severe lacerations were Jerome J. Litvin, 34, of 4840 Western ave., Bethesda; his wife, Bernice, 27, and their three-year-old daughter, Cecile Ann; Capt. Lee O. Smith, 37, believed stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C., and Leo F. Richards, 21, of Philadelphia.

In Washington, two persons were injured at 12th and D sts. sw., early yesterday when their motorcycle crashed into a car that had stopped for a red light.

Admitted to Emergency Hospital with a possible skull fracture was Mrs. Margaret Gunn, 21, of 327 1st st. ne. Her husband, John, 31, who was driving the motorcycle, was treated there for lacerations to the groin and released.

The driver of the car, Isaac Walker, jr., 25, of 1113 1st st., Alexandria, Va., was not injured. A hearing will be held later in the Corporation Counsel's office.

nesota ave. ne. with his half-brother, Dennis Foster, 13.

Leaving the movie at about 5 p. m., the boys took a short-cut across the Benning yard tracks. Dennis told Karl he had "hid something around here" a week ago—a key chain, actually—and while he went to get it Karl sauntered on up the tracks.

It was dark now and when Dennis turned back he couldn't find his half brother. He remembered a train passing about this time. He returned home, got a flashlight and went back looking for Karl. Not finding him, he came back home again and his mother called police.

It was not until 7:15 a. m. yesterday that the body was found.

Karl long had been coming home along the railroad tracks, his mother said. She said he had always been very careful in crossing the tracks.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday at 3 p. m. at the Lee funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Interment will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

handbooks and seven as relay centers.

Canadian authorities could not be reached for details of the Windsor raids.

All the alleged handbooks were in Detroit. One of the relay points was in Detroit and the others in Windsor.

Police said race information was telephoned from Toledo, Ohio, to Windsor relay points. They, in turn, phoned it across the river to Detroit.

In some cases, intermediate relay stations in Detroit were used to transmit the data to handbook operators. Police obtained the telephone number of the Toledo master center during the raids.

Evidence gleaned in Detroit will be used in Windsor and vice versa, a precedent-setting procedure.

Detroit police said all those arrested will be held for questioning at least until Monday. No charges have been filed.

However, Inspector Slack said a warrant charging conspiracy to violate state gaming laws probably would be filed by the middle of next week in Detroit.

"It will be the middle of the week before we are able to analyze the whole thing," he said.

Statistics have been accused of telling everybody's story. They're used by both sides so often to prove a point that their argumentative powers have been sadly dissipated.

So we're not about to quote you figures, but if you were to keep score on the dress of men appearing on Washington streets you would uncover some startling facts. Without venturing percentages, you would discover that there were a dismal few of those fellows with suits having shoulders as wide as the walk, extreme collar styles and coat lengths that almost tip the knees. These men are merely hogging the scene.

No, a vast majority of the male population prefers clothes without exaggeration. These are men who like wearing gentlemanly clothes . . . flattering to the average build and an expression of good taste. Men who would rather let their clothes concentrate on wearing ability and comfort and let style be a natural result of all things being at their best.

At the next opportunity, won't you visit The Men's Store and let us show you gentlemanly clothes . . . in our terms.

Loan to China Urged by President

carrying out Lend-Lease operations than if we sent him to Moscow as Ambassador.

What would you think of asking Joe Davies to go back to Moscow? I think Joe would be really persona grata, would have access to Stalin, and in a couple of weeks could get into complete touch with the airplane and tank situation. If you think well of this, will you speak to him?

F. D. R.

Major General James H. Burns of Army Ordnance came into Lend-Lease when it was originally set up under Hopkins, and had acquired a reputation for getting things done. Davies, who had been Ambassador to the U. S. S. R. from 1936 to 1938 and whose book, "Mission to Moscow," published in 1941, had exercised a considerable influence on American opinion, was well regarded by the Russians. Because of health, Davies could not accept the appointment but F. D. R. sent him on a special mission to Stalin in 1943.

F.D.R. to William D. Leahy in Vichy

THE WHITE HOUSE
Jan. 20, 1942

Dear Bill:

Here are some thoughts which you could use if the occasion offered—either with Marshal Petain or General Weygand.

(1). It is most important for the French Government and the French people to realize that the President of the United States is about the best friend they have; that one of his greatest wishes is to see France reconstituted in the post-war period in accordance with its splendid position in history.

(2). The word "France" in the mind of the President includes the French Colonial Empire.

(3). The attack on the United States and the declaration of war must make the French Government and people realize that any act on their part either at home or in the Colonies which would give aid and comfort to the Germans or Italians must, of necessity, help the Germans and hurt the United States. The United States could not, of course, take such a hostile act lying down. That is just common sense which the French should realize.

(4). Now that the United States is at war, it should be perfectly clear to the French Government and the French people that if Germany or Italy attacked unoccupied France or any of the French colonies, in any way, the President could not regard acquiescence to such an attack as anything else than playing the German game.

(5). On the other hand, resistance by the French against German or Italian attack either in France itself or in any part of the Colonial Empire would be regarded by the President as a normal and natural reaction. Such resistance would have not only the moral support of the United States, but it would also have the physical support of the United States by every possible military and naval assistance we could bring to bear.

The above seems to me almost like primer because it is wholly and logically simple. F. D. R.

Admiral Leahy communicated this message, which had come via Hull, to Petain and Darlan on January 27. Petain replied that Vichy would resist invasion by British, de Gaullists, Germans, or Americans.

He said that use of the French fleet by the Germans or the acquisition of bases in North Africa was no longer a question. If the Germans did invade North Africa he would accept American aid only if he himself requested it.

Admiral Leahy concluded from this interview that we could expect no contribution from Vichy in keeping the Axis out of French Africa. A secret approach to General Weygand, who was living privately near Nice, elicited the disheartening reply that he would act only upon instructions from Vichy.

F.D.R. to John L. McCrea

THE WHITE HOUSE
Feb. 9, 1942

Memorandum for Captain McCrea:

Will you let me have the chronological report on the Japanese (two man) submarine) washed up on the beach outside of Pearl Harbor, who found her, and who took possession of her? What do you find? Who is in charge of the Japanese officers?

F. D. R.

Captain John L. McCrea former aide to Admiral Stark, had been detailed as the President's naval aide during 1942.

F.D.R. to Winston Churchill in London

THE WHITE HOUSE
Feb. 11, 1942

Dear Winston:

These people who go around under assumed names render themselves open to all kinds of indignity and suspicion. The enclosed correspondence, which I have arranged in chronological order, will amuse you. Ned Bruce is an old friend of mine and a really grand person—but is completely unorthodox. While you were here he sent a letter to a man named "Marin" in my care.

The British Embassy was asked for verification and I suppose the matter has been to Scotland Yard and back again.

Some day I want to see a painting by this alias fellow—and some day I hope you will get enough time to resume the painting and that I will be able to return to making shop models and collecting stamps!

As ever yours,

Edward Bruce was head of the Fine Arts Section of the Library of Congress. He had written the President as follows:

Edward Bruce to F.D.R. at the White House

WASHINGTON
Dec. 23, 1941

My dear Mr. President:

We have always had a very high regard in the Section for an English painter named Charles Marin who we understand is otherwise known as Winston Churchill. If I am correct in assuming that this is the same person who is your great visitor now in the White House, would you be kind enough to hand him the enclosed note as we would like very much to have him come to lunch.

Devotedly yours,
Edward Bruce

The enclosed letter to "Charles Marin" (who was indeed Churchill) read:

"My dear Marin:

I just heard you were staying in Washington and as you are on our list of the artists we like to entertain at the Section of Fine Arts, I hope very much you will drop in and have lunch with us. We are not very hot on enterainment these days, but we serve coffee, which is provided by a friend of ours, between 12:00 and 2:00 o'clock and have a table where the guests of the Section can eat the lunch which they bring with them.

If you could fix a date, I think I could get one or two of our better artists to drop in because I know they would like to meet you.

"Very sincerely yours,
"EDWARD BRUCE
"Chief of the Section of Fine Arts."

Free Child's Armor

The timing is perfect for the Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth which opened yesterday. For the conference in its accent on the emotional and spiritual aspects of the child's development is reaffirming the Nation's faith in the worth of the individual. It is saying: We Americans, despite the great peril we now face from the latest upsurge of barbarian forces, will not develop our children merely as cannon fodder, robots, Spartans, or even physically healthy animals. More than ever we will try to give them the inner stability that free human beings need.

The physical is not being forgotten—how could it be when four out of five children live in families with income less than $3000 a year?—but the main objective of the 5000 citizens attending is to find out how their communities can best help the American child to develop a healthy personality. For we are at last realizing that this is not only the best insurance against the warped mind that breeds the fanatic, the hatemonger, the tyrant, but is also the genesis of the responsible citizen upon whom the survival of free democratic government depends.

Even before world tensions grew so acute, those preparing for this fifth White House conference recognized that the way of the midcentury child would be hard. Social and technological change gave him a great test of adaptation. It was foreseen, also, that he would be shadowed by world uncertainty and confusion. Now it looks as if his way might be even more dangerous. For, in the world of this decade, for which the conference will set this Nation's major goals for children, the free child finds himself greatly outnumbered by the hordes of the regimented. As he grows up he will find himself one of a relatively small brigade that must uphold mental enlightment and human freedom against ruthless primitive masses seeking the slavery of the spirit. To do this he must be given the "strength of ten" through his emotional stability, maturity, self-discipline and creativeness.

It is the aim of the present conference to gather together what we know today about the development of healthy personality in children and to put that knowledge to work through homes, schools, churches, community agencies. In doing that it is contributing the most valuable future defense to America.

The Grand Reversal

It was so sensational, so unbelievable, so stupendous, and in general such a tax upon the ecstatic vocabulary, that many news editors gave it precedence over the rout in Korea or Senator McCarthy's howls for the impeachment of the President. But when we come down to cold-blooded analysis, what really happened last Saturday in Philadelphia was that a set of football players wearing the uniform of the United States Naval Academy—and in particular one Mr. Zastrow—proved themselves a good deal more skillful at the business than another set wearing the colors of the United States Military Academy.

Now it is usual, we understand, in these athletic contests for one side to win and the other to lose. What made the result incredible was that almost everybody—with the possible exceptions of the Navy players and their coach, Mr. Erdelatz—had decided long in advance which side was to do which. We had decided it on the basis of statistics, which is supposed to be the scientific way to go about such things. All season long the Army players had been winning football games with what appeared to be consummate ease; all season long the Navy players had been making heavy weather of it. Besides the Navy had been badly beaten by one team that in its turn had been badly beaten by the Army. Statistically speaking, the game seemed to be over long before it began. Here and there perhaps there were persons who wondered why, since the result was so eminently predictable, the two schools bothered to have the game at all. The answer to that seems to be that it gave a great many important persons, including the President of the United States, a plausible excuse for spending a few hours in the open air, and for watching the interesting, and, as they say, colorful, exhibitions between the halves, which go on no matter who is winning or losing.

Well, as you know, the statistics let us down shamefully—flummoxed us, diddled us, and no doubt a good many professional and amateur bookmakers besides. The result of the game was what the technical experts—who, come what may, are never at a loss for scientific terminology—call a "major upset." In some other fields like national elections and military tactics these major upsets are becoming commonplace, even boresome. But sports we had supposed to be one field in which the inevitable was the inevitable. Now we may live to see former champions come back and good little men beat good big men. We are sure we don't know what the moral of it is. Perhaps the whole mathematical system needs overhauling. There are some who say that it means merely that all along Coach Erdelatz was playing Fabius to Coach Blaik's Hannibal, skillfully retreating, luring him on, tempting him into overconfidence until the moment came to destroy him. Others say that the result unquestionably proves the superiority of the late Admiral Mahan over the late General von Clausewitz; but if we were you, we wouldn't take that one too seriously.

Foreign Agents

In his veto message on the McCarran Act, President Truman made the point, among others, that most of this legislation was not needed, that laws already on the statute books gave the Government ample power to deal with the Communist problem. The soundness of the President's contention finds fresh support in Attorney General McGrath's recent petition to the Subversive Activities Control Board for an order requiring the Communist Party to register as a "Communist-action organization."

The Attorney General's petition is grounded on the charge that the Communist Party "has been and is substantially dominated and controlled by the government and Communist Party of the Soviet Union, and by the foreign organization controlling the world Communist movement . . ." The charge is both valid and demonstrable. If this is so, then the Communist Party, in failing to register with the Department of Justice, was violating the laws of the United States for more than a decade before the McCarran Act was passed.

In 1938, Congress adopted the Foreign Agents Registration (McCormack) Act requiring "anyone who, within the United States, acts at the order, request, or under the direction, of a foreign principal" to register with the Department of Justice. The term "anyone" embraced organizations as well as individuals. In 1940, Congress adopted the Voorhis Act (now Section 2386 of the Criminal Code) requiring registration of any organization "subject to foreign control which engages in political activity . . ." And to make quite clear the aim of this legislation, Congress defined "political activity" as any activity the "purpose or aim of which is forcible overthrow" of the Government.

In the course of his petition to the Subversive Activities Control Board, Mr. McGrath took specific note of the Communist Party's liability under the Voorhis Act. He stated:

> In November, 1940, the Communist Party voted to disaffiliate from the Communist International for the avowed purpose of removing itself from the terms of the so-called Voorhis Act, but in fact the organization continued to uphold the principles of the Communist International, and the Communist International continued its direction and supervision over the organization through its resident representatives in the United States.

Of course, if the disaffiliation of the party from the International was, as we assume, a mere ruse, then the party was subject to prosecution for failure to register under the Voorhis Act; and the "resident representatives" of the International, if not all the members of the party, were subject to prosecution for failure to register under the McCormack Act. Long ago this newspaper urged such prosecutions. We thought, and still think, that it would have been preferable to proceed against the Communist Party under the McCormack and Voorhis Acts instead of under the constitutionally questionable Smith Act provisions restricting advocacy.

No doubt the department's reason for not prosecuting under the Voorhis and McCormack Acts was that it lacked until recently the evidence necessary to make prosecution effective. Now that it does possess such evidence, however, it could proceed under those laws without any need for the additional authorization of the McCarran Act. All that the McCarran Act adds to previous powers, so far as registration of the Communist Party is concerned, is that it enables the Department of Justice to present its case before an administrative tribunal instead of before a court of law and to rely on anonymous informers instead of upon witnesses subject to cross-examination. This short-cutting of the judicial process ought to occasion the gravest misgivings when it is applied to political freedom.

Corporation Profits

Great differences of opinion exist as to the best method of taxing corporation profits, but there is abundant evidence to show that many billions of dollars of additional revenue can be obtained from this source without injury to business, if the taxes are properly distributed. Corporation profits in 1950 will total 37 billion dollars before taxes, according to official estimates, and 22 billion after taxes. Dividends will amount to 8.5 billion dollars, leaving 13.5 billion dollars of undistributed profits available for reinvestment.

Contrast this showing with the record for 1943 and 1944—the peak years of war production—when profits after taxes broke all previous records, rising to 10.6 in 1943 and 10.8 in 1944, with undistributed profits in each year amounting to approximately six billion dollars. Even after allowing for decreases in the purchasing power of the dollar resulting from the interim rise in prices, it is apparent that corporation profits after taxes will be much larger this year on an adjusted basis than they were in 1943-44. Moreover, taxes will take a much smaller proportion of total corporation profits in 1950 than during the war period.

Obviously any increases in such taxes are going to hurt. Dividends will have to be reduced in some cases; inroads will be made on profits that otherwise would be reinvested. As a large part of the funds required to provide more working capital for expanding businesses is supplied from undistributed earnings, the higher corporation taxes go, the greater will be the need for Government-supplied capital for expansion purposes and for Government-guaranteed production loans. It is evident that Congress will have to make many difficult decisions in framing its corporation tax bill, not only as regards methods of taxation, but also the amount of taxes that can safely be imposed without hampering growth. The one indisputable fact that emerges from the controversy is that corporation profits are extraordinarily high and will have to be taxed much more heavily to provide enough revenue to put the Government on a pay-as-you-go basis that will help to curb inflation.

Extending Rent Control

Senate debate on a bill extending Federal rent controls to February 28 starts this week, and the Senate District Committee is also holding hearings on a similar measure for extension of local rent control. When the present Federal control law was passed residential construction was at record heights and the housing boom gave promise of indefinite continuance. It seemed feasible and desirable for the Federal Government to withdraw from the field and permit controls to lapse or to be replaced by local control systems, if needed. The rearmament program has radically changed this outlook. For production shifts will entail shifts of population, creating or intensifying housing shortages in areas where defense industries are located. At the same time home building is being cut back by credit controls and materials shortages. Residents of many of the 2000 odd communities that have taken no affirmative action to extend controls face the prospect of higher rentals that would go far toward defeating Government efforts to curb the rise in living costs.

The argument that rent control is unfair because it singles out a special class of property owners for discriminatory treatment had force a short time ago. But controls are now being rapidly extended to other segments of the economy, and it is almost certain that wage and price controls will soon be employed to hold down prices of goods in short supply. Abolition of rent control would, therefore, probably create a special class of favored owners of housing which is also in short supply in some parts of the country.

By extending Federal rent controls for another two months, the present Congress will not only protect areas that would be automatically decontrolled after December 31; it will also afford time for the incoming Congress to consider revisions in the law made necessary by changes in the housing outlook. Affirmative action is urgently needed to strengthen the provisions of the law and specifically to permit the Housing Expediter "to recontrol any area or class of accommodations where the needs of national defense warrant such action."

Using The Bomb

Newspaper and radio interpretation of President Truman's comments on the atomic bomb have caused understandable concern in countries intimidated by the thought of atomic warfare. The time has come, however, to cut through the fictions about the bomb sown by the Stockholm peace petition and restore it to the arsenal of the free world. The interest of other countries in whether the bomb should be used must of course be considered. Prime Minister Attlee and Premier Pleven are reported to be in agreement that the United States should let the United Nations decide whether the atomic bomb should be used. If they mean use of this weapon should be under U. N. control in U. N. Far Eastern operations, they are absolutely right. But the decision whether to use it ought by common consent to be based on a calculation of all the consequences, including, of course, moral consequences.

It is aggressive war itself rather than the instruments of war that is immoral. The fact that poison gas was not widely used in World War II, for instance, may be shown to have rested less on grounds of morality than on the lack of practical advantage. This is not to say that the United States should figure on using the atom bomb indiscriminately in any war; nor does it mean that this country should ever relax its efforts to get a self-enforcing agreement on the A-bomb. But, barring agreement, the bomb must be available as a last card, and the criterion for use should be the probable military and moral effect.

Assessment of probable effect would have to include recognition that the atom bomb could destroy but could not win a war by itself. It is a weapon of limited application. In Korea, for example, use of the A-bomb has been ruled out because there is no military target worth this expenditure; likewise the atom-bombing of Chinese cities would have little military effect. The bomb has great potential utility, however, against military concentrations and strategic centers in Russia. And if no other means avail, the bomb must be thought of and used as any other weapon.

German Apathy

The recent elections in Germany should have surprised none. Yet Mrs. Meyer, in her recent series of articles on Germany was one of the few, if not the only one, to remark on the war weariness of the German people and their disinclination to participate in any war either for or against us.

One of the amazing features of the discussions and comments on German participation in a western Europen army was the failure to take into consideration the thoughts of the German people themselves on this question. Statesmen and commentators blithely argued among themselves as to whether the Germans should be permitted to contribute two or 10 or 20 divisions without sounding German opinion. Adenauer and his party are to be blamed because they tried to impose the wishes of the occupying powers on the German people instead of acquainting the discussion group with the German feelings on the matter.

The time has come to decide whether we shall continue to fight yesterday's wars or to bend our efforts in the preparation for tomorrow's attack. We cannot do both. We shall need all the help we can get and it will be comforting to know that the Japanese and the Germans are on our side. The only way to assure us of their wholehearted cooperation is to give them back their self-respect and the will to fight for the things worth while. This can only be done by treating them as equals and no longer as conquered peoples.

Incidentally, you are to be congratulated on Mrs. Meyer's articles. It is refreshing to read the astute observations of a reporter who has the courage to dig under the surface and disregard the easy path of official handouts.

"Situation Of Strength"

At this time many citizens wish they had the opportunity to ask Secretary of State Dean Acheson direct whether the decision to launch the ill-fated all-out attack on the Chinese Communists, timed to coincide with the arrival of the Chinese envoys here to discuss negotiated peace, originated with the military command or in Washington. The intent is so suggestive of the Secretary's formula "creating situations of strength," (which would work better if less trumpeted) that it is difficult not to suspect that the general had orders to furnish some fresh aces for the Secretary's hand at Flushing.

On the other hand, it is difficult to understand how a decision to launch an attack which on the face of it appeared so ill-advised, could have been arrived at lightly. It may be supposed that the Chinese had moved their troops into Korea first to create their own situation of strength.

They had not whispered, but shouted what they wanted strength for: To be able to enjoin the United States to cease and desist interference in a Chinese civil war. Their continued avoidance of engagements in Korea, pending negotiations of this difference, made it apparent that China considered her situation of strength adequately served by merely maintaining her army in war-preparedness within Korea.

It was equally apparent that she could not, and would not abandon the position created by her to win the paramount object of her foreign policy. If cornered and attacked by the United Nations forces, she would have to fight with the fatalistic fury of an Oriental army.

Why did the United Nations forces attack then a matter of days, or hours even, before learning what the Chinese price of withdrawal would be?

Chinese Reasons

Mr. Acheson, in his speech on foreign policy, took the ground that the behavior of the United States had been impeccable, giving not one iota of reason for the anger and intervention of the Chinese Communists. That is no doubt, on the surface, "patriotic," but in essence it is wrong and disastrous.

Nobody knows better than Mr. Acheson the extent of our folly in countenancing General MacArthur's mad behavior in advertising to the world his devotion to Red China's deadly enemy, Chiang Kai-chek, and his determination to have his own way regardless of consequences. Why should Red China believe our protestations of friendship when our acts are in direct contravention of them?

For months our allies, especially the British, have bitterly distrusted MacArthur, and yet our President returned from a conference with him declaring that they were in complete agreement. Cannot we put ourselves in the place of the Chinese for one brief moment? Would we tolerate for a day the conference of one of Russia's generals with a Mexican government implacably hostile to us, the open implication (following on openly given aid) that there was an alliance being consummated between them?

"John M. Clark"

Just a few words of praise and thanks for your excellent editorial of November 28 on John M. Clark.

I met Mr. Clark only once, but had the opportunity of reading the Claremont Eagle rather frequently during my four years at Dartmouth College, where he was several times guest lecturer in the Great Issues Course, a compulsory fourth-year course in world affairs). His lectures in that course were marked by modesty and quiet confidence, as well as a remarkable knowledge of the why and wherefores of newspapering.

"Rather unsavory" is an unusually gentle epithet with which to describe the State of the printed news in New Hampshire—a State whose largest daily is Loeb's Manchester Union. Clark and the Eagle were welcome daily relief indeed.

The Washington Post can well be proud of its graduate. Your writer perfectly describes Clark in combining with his name the all too unusual tandem of craftsmanship and ideals.

No Aid To Tito

I join in the protests of those who are against the increased help to Yugoslavia. Perhaps the United States is aiding Tito only because he is alleged to be in revolt against Moscow, but the Yugoslavian government is Communist and will remain so. As typified by the imprisonment of Archbishop Stepinac, there is neither religious or any other freedom in Yugoslavia. When war comes, Tito must either side with Russia or be overrun by Soviet armies.

Why should we not increase aid to Spain, a country which is as ardent a foe of communism as our Nation? Actually, through American aid, Tito is making a success of communism in Yugoslavia. I doubt whether the Yugoslav people are very much aware of the real source of the aid reaching them. MICHAEL THOMAS.

Warning To Kremlin

When South Korea was invaded last June we knew, beyond any reasonable doubt, that the real aggressor was Russia. Clearly we should have laid aside the ostensibly politic pretense of ignorance, stated the facts clearly to all the world, including Russia, and warned that in case of any further aggression by any Russian satellite (and all the world knows who and what they are) we should not content ourselves with opposing the mere instrument of aggression in the field but would immediately take measures against the well-known aggressor in Moscow.

Had we done this in July, or August, or September, would Communist China have committed its aggression on Korea in November? I think not. But this is water over the dam. The aggression has occurred.

In this situation, if we now state the facts and hold the Kremlin responsible as the real aggressor and take action accordingly, is it possible that this course might bring a solution in Korea and avoid a third world war, at least this time? I think it is possible.

First, the known facts justify the conclusion that the Chinese aggression must have been undertaken under pressure from the Kremlin and with the promise of its assistance. Without that assistance Communist China could not have hoped to succeed in that aggression; and Communist China knows that when that assistance is withdrawn it must fail in Korea.

Second, the imminent alternative possibility is world war. The Kremlin is not averse to war and aggression, so long as such war and aggression are carried out by its satellites without directly involving "Holy Russia" itself. But at no time has the Kremlin gang initiated aggression by open hostilities in the face of clear and positive warning of retaliation by a power capable of making such retaliation, or (which is equivalent) when they knew that such retaliation could and would be made.

Therefore, it is not unrealistic to think that, when faced with the positive warning of certain retaliation which may be visited upon themselves personally, they will avoid inviting such retaliation and will withdraw to their previous program of "cold war" which they can wage with greater security to their own persons.

But suppose it should not succeed. Suppose we should have to make good our warning, and drop bombs on the Kremlin. It would be war. It would not be "preventive" war, for it would be war against an aggressor initiated by his own deliberate choice and act. It would in fact be a mere continuance of the present war against the same aggressor in which the aggressor is sheltered by a one-way barrier from behind which he can (and continually does) attack us, but which (because of our own self-restraint) prevents us from attacking him in return.

What is the alternative? It is not peace, or even the avoidance of war. It may be the continuance of the present monstrous situation in which we are forced not only to fight at the disadvantage of being always open to attack and never free to attack in return, but also of fighting a wholly futile war which, the real aggressor still free and unscathed and biding his own time to make his own attack upon us.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Who Failed?

EVERY AMERICAN, in and out of public life, is asking who is responsible for the disastrous intelligence failure which has now led to military disaster in Korea. The answer is simple. The whole responsibility belongs to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's own intelligence organization, headed by one of the little circle of high staff officers who have been with MacArthur since Bataan, Maj. Gen. Charles A. Willoughby.

This would not be so if General MacArthur were subject to normal rules. In a normal war theater, agent nets and other machinery for gathering and processing intelligence belong to the national intelligence organization, the CIA. In a normal theater, by the same token, the theater G-2 is primarily responsible for military interpretation of the intelligence thus obtained, and has only the most limited responsibility for intelligence collection.

Even during the second World War, however, when this pattern was becoming established in other theaters, General MacArthur showed sharp dislike for it. Indeed, he actually banned the CIA's wartime predecessor, the Office of Strategic Services, from operating in his Pacific theater. Postwar, he continued to maintain the same ban until this spring, when the CIA was at last permitted to get its toe in the door. Even then, moreover, the unusual concession was demanded and granted, that the local representatives of the CIA should be placed under the operational control of General Willoughby, as theater G-2.

THIS ARRANGEMENT remained in force after the Korean War broke out, until after the Inchon landing operation. The bold and brilliant stroke at Inchon was the best possible proof that a great military commander like MacArthur can work real miracles with good intelligence. Inchon would hardly have been possible without solid detailed information about the weakness of the enemy defenses; and MacArthur himself congratulated the CIA representatives on their part in securing this information.

For some occult reason, however, trouble followed almost at once. Not very long after the Inchon landing, the arrangement made in the spring was suddenly upset. The old ban on the CIA was again enforced.

The whole task of gathering and processing intelligence, as well as interpreting the intelligence for the theater commander and for Washington, once more reverted to General Willoughby's organization, where the entire responsibility still remains.

Rather transparent attempts are now being made to suggest that the intelligence thus provided was not really so bad after all. It is hinted, in one breath, that our plans in Korea only miscarried because of the interdict on air operations beyond the Chinese border (which General MacArthur of course knew all about long before he gave the recent order to attack). In the next breath, it is also stated that the true intention of the "home by Christmas" offensive was only to blunt an expected Chinese onslaught. This is demonstrable nonsense.

AS EARLY as late September, General MacArthur had been positively convinced that the Chinese would not intervene in Korea. At Wake Island he expressed this conviction most forcibly to the President, only a few days before the Chinese crossed the border. The sudden appearance of Chinese troops in combat in October very evidently took our divisions in Korea wholly by surprise. And even thereafter, the authorities in Tokyo clearly believed that the Chinese intervention was essentially unimportant, inspiring many stories about the small numbers of Chinese troops in Korea and their demoralization by American firepower.

Finally, no general in his senses would have hurled our thin lines of men, with a great gap in the center, against an enemy whom he did not confidently regard as weak and on the run. General MacArthur must, he can only, have ordered the "home by Christmas" offensive on the basis of an estimate of enemy capabilities and intentions so grossly false that over 200,000 Chinese troops were somehow lost in the shuffle. He must, he can only, have been perfectly sincere in saying that he hoped to "end the war for all practical purposes." It is a dreadful thing that General MacArthur thus walked into a huge, well-laid trap. But it is more just to our most eminent American soldier to admit this frankly, than to try to pretend that he got into the trap of his own volition.

In short, the horror that confronts us proves the converse of a rule already given. Just as a great commander can work miracles with good intelligence, so even the greatest commander cannot overcome bad intelligence. Since the bad intelligence emanated from General MacArthur's own headquarters, this may displease those who like to believe that he has attained a sort of divine perfection. But facts are facts none the less and they must be faced.

U. N. Honor Roll

I suggest that in the lobby of the United Nations building there be placed a panel in the form of an honor roll, on which would be inscribed the names of the nations which sent troops to Korea and the names of the military organizations which were sent.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

German Doctrine of Rearmament

SINCE early October I have been traveling in Europe seeking to learn what I could in Britain, the Scandinavian countries, Germany and in France about the reaction to the great military decisions taken in Washington last summer. I shall begin here with a report on German rearmament, or rather more specifically and accurately on the West German view of the rearmament of West Germany.

Lippmann

PUT that way, we approach the problem as Germans approach it: Aware that we are talking about the rearmament of a part of a mutilated Germany. Nothing but misunderstanding can come of forgetting—as it is so much easier to do in Washington and in London than in Bonn, in Berlin and in Paris—that Germany is partitioned and dismembered. That is why rearmament is not, as it is for example in Japan, a matter of allowing or even of assisting a defeated country to recover the sovereign power of self-defense.

For the Germans a defensive war would begin in the middle of Germany. All Germans are vividly aware of this fact, and all their views on what to do about rearmament are reactions to it. All are agreed—be they old generals, the pacifists or the new nationalists—that a defensive battle in the middle of Germany would be tantamount to national suicide. The West German leaders, whether in the government or in the loyal opposition, differ only, I believe, about how best to induce or compel the Americans to accept what is fair to call the German doctrine of German rearmament.

WHAT, then, is the German doctrine? It is that the German people will not enlist, nor should they be asked by their leaders to enlist, in an army which is formed for the strategic purpose of holding a defensive line between the Elbe and the Rhine. Naturally enough, if one thinks about it, they are bitterly opposed to the idea of making Western Germany the main battlefield for the defense of Britain, France, and North America. The German leaders who have to be elected insist that German people are as war-wise as they are war-weary: that they cannot be induced—while there are civil liberties and representative government—to fight the kind of sacrificial war which they believe the Allied strategists are proposing to them.

They—and that, I am convinced means all the influential German leaders who would support rearmament in any form—say that except for mercenaries enlisted in a sort of bootleg army, and adventurers who feel they have nothing further to lose, the Germans as a nation can be brought willingly into a Western coalition only if we can prove to them that we have the military power and that it is our strategic purpose to carry the war immediately and swiftly beyond the Vistula River.

Only then, they insist, has what is left of Germany a chance to avoid the devastation of a modern battlefield. Only then have the eastern Germans a chance to escape extermination or mass deportation to Siberia. Only for a war to reunite Germany and to recover the lost territories might the disillusioned German masses be aroused to fight. "They will not willingly go back into the army," I was told by one of the most eminent of living Germans, "unless we and you offer them German perspectives, and can convince them that the Allied command is competent and that the military resources immediately available are enough for a swift success."

WHAT I have just written is a composite summary, largely but not altogether in my own words, of what came out of a series of private interviews. Yet I am betraying no confidences. For I could now document the whole of it from public statements, now that I have learned, as can anyone who will listen to the Germans, how to read what they say.

For example: Dr. Kurt Schumacher, the leader of the Social Democratic Party, was already saying last August, when the decision to propose German rearmament had been taken but was not yet announced, that "the German military contribution makes sense if the world democracies will defend Germany offensively to the east (in German: 'offensive nach dem Osten verteidigt') . . . that is the first and substantially the only hypothesis for a yes or no on German rearmament . . . this is not a matter of increasing the occupation forces by one or two armored divisions, but rather of a great centralization of forces—of a concentration on the eastern border of the West German Republic of decisive military forces." The German language is not always very clear, and I have probably not improved the clarity of this statement by my translation, but what Dr. Schumacher had in mind is clear enough.

THIS is not just Dr. Schumacher's private view. The demand for larger American and British forces in Germany as a precondition of German rearmament is fundamental and is general. I asked one of the highest authorities just what he wanted from us: "At least seven or eight American armored divisions in western Germany by next April," he replied. Without that, he insisted, the situation in Germany "would crumble." I told him that I did not understand. Surely he did not suppose the German people would think seven American divisions could hold off 35 Russian divisions.

"Of course not," he said, "but we want the American divisions in Germany because only if you have that many men here will we believe that the fate of the United States has been tied to the fate of Germany. If the Germans do not believe that your fate has been tied to their fate, they will seek an independent road to salvation—independent of the United States—and that is what I meant when I said the situation would crumble.

"Now if you have only two or three divisions over here, you might treat them as expendable if you came to feel that you have greater interests in Asia than in Europe. But you would not be able to treat the main core of your army as expendable. The Germans, therefore, will never believe that they are your allies unless they see most of your military power so committed in Germany that you are not free to change your minds."

NATURALLY I put to him, as I did to all the others, the American question, which was how the Germans can afford to set conditions about their own rearmament, considering that the Russians might at any time invade them.

To this the German answer can, I think, be summarized accurately enough as follows: "For Germany a little rearming would be worse than none at all. It would provide a provocation and a pretext for Soviet aggression without adding at all to German or to European security. Germany can be 'defended' only if Russia wishes to avoid a world war with the United States.

"We think Russia will avoid a war with the United States and therefore will not invade us. We may be wrong. If we are wrong, then 10 German divisions won't save us. If we are right that the Russians will not attack because they will not risk a war with America, then—provided America will commit its main forces to Germany—we can build up German forces which, along with the American and the British (for we do not count on the French) can liberate eastern Germany either by war or by the threat of war."

THE CRUX of the matter is that the rearmament of Western Germany is organic with and inseparable from the unification of Germany and the restoration of German territory. The idea that the Germans could or would dedicate themselves to the defense of the West is an illusion that is entertained only in Washington, and perhaps in London.

One would never know it from the awkward and even stupid way in which the French case has been argued, but the fact of the matter is that the French and the Germans do not misunderstand each other as to what German rearmament means. The French insistence that German troops shall have no autonomy stems out from the ancient fear that a German army would march against Paris; it stems from an accurate and contemporary realization that a German army would wish to march, and to drag along with it all the rest of us, against Koenigsberg and Warsaw.

THE SATELLITE governments make the same appraisal of German rearmament. And this, let us not deceive ourselves, is the view of the Soviet government. On October 18, in a note which seems to have been more or less ignored in Washington, though not in Europe, the USSR issued a warning which was as blunt and as ominous as the warning which the Chinese Foreign Minister made through the Indian Ambassador in Peiping before we crossed the thirty-eighth parallel.

But I have the gravest doubts whether Washington appreciated the conditions for and the consequences of German rearmament when the decision was taken last summer. Rereading now what Mr. Acheson, Mr. McCloy, and General Bradley have said publicly on this critical and paramount European issue, it is disconcerting—especially in the light of miscalculations in Asia—to find how little what they have said resembles what the responsible and influential Germans will tell anyone who listens to them.

Mechanical Heart Passes Test on Dogs

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3 (U.P.)—a team of surgeons disclosed today that they had a "mechanical heart" that works so effectively on animals that they are ready to try it on a human being.

This new-type device, which has been used on dogs and kept them alive for as long as an hour and 10 minutes, detours blood away from the natural heart and lungs, thereby permitting surgeons to operate on a damaged heart while it is at rest.

It has not been used on a human patient so far, simply because the "right" patient has not come along. By "right" patient, the doctors mean one who has suffered cardiac stoppage on an operating table and failed to "come back" after all known methods of resuscitation had been tried.

The doctors' team is headed by Dr. Charles P. Bailey, chief thoracic surgeon at Hahnemann Hospital. It includes Drs. Thomas J. E. O'Neill, Robert P. Gover, William L. Jamison, and Hector J. Redono Ramirez.

The 'heart' is contained in a transparent cabinet 30 inches high, 16 inches wide and 18 inches deep.

Be a much better Politician for $1

Whether you realize it or not, in the world of politics and Government service your personal progress is definitely limited by your understanding of how to use TIME in "selling" your ideas to groups of people, committees, individuals.

In a 45-page brochure, Time Out for Mental Digestion, which is packed with the psychology of influencing people, Robert Rawls shows you:

- Why you often fail to convince people.
- How to handle committees and win over groups of people.
- How to avoid giving people "mental indigestion."
- How to cope with people's emotional reactions.
- How to use time in place of arguments to carry people along with you, almost irresistibly.

Veteran politicians and top-flight salesmanagers agree that the Robert Rawls "Time Out Technique" is a tremendously important discovery in human relations. Unless you understand how to use it, all the rest of your life you may just miss the success that might be yours. A common comment of readers is, "I only wish I could have read this 20 years ago!"

Profits Bill Would Yield $4.6 Billion

By the United Press

The new excess profits tax bill will tap business for four billion and 600 million dollars in the first year, the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee reported yesterday.

That is one billion and 200 million dollars more than estimated last week and 600 million dollars more than President Truman had requested.

The tax—aimed at war-swollen profits—will be retroactive to last July 1, assuming the Senate goes along with the House version. The bill comes up for House debate today, with passage set for Tuesday.

The committee's Democratic majority hiked the estimated revenue return on the basis of "profits which may be reasonably expected in 1951." In other words, it believes business is set for a big boom due to Government war contracts.

They said the bill is "more liberal" than the World War II excess profits measure, and carries out the promise made by Congress last summer to enact such a levy.

It would impose a 75 percent excess tax, the "excess" being anything over 85 percent of a firm's average profits for its best three years during 1946-49.

Nine of the 10 committee Republicans issued a blistering minority report asserting the bill is "inflationary," full of "inequities" and likely to prevent needed business expansion, particularly in the aircraft industry.

They also said it will force public utilities to raise their rates to consumers.

The tenth Republican, Representative Hal Holmes (Wash.) said he agreed in "several respects" with the GOP report but that various parts of the bill had been "improved."

The Republicans concede the bill will pass but they plan to try and add an increase in regular corporation income taxes.

The Senate Finance Committee begins hearings on the bill today, with Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder as the first witness. Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.), said that hearings will be brief but, unlike in the House, witnesses will be allowed to propose corporate income tax increases.

Strong Senate and House opposition to the bill dissolved after President Truman's request for almost 18 billion dollars in emergency defense funds.

C. U. Players Act 'Thor, With Angels'

By Richard L. Coe

CATHOLIC UNIVERSITY'S production of "Thor, with Angels," by Christopher Fry, requires a little background discussion.

This is one of a group of plays written for the Chapter House of Canterbury Cathedral at the behest, as I get it, of an organization called "Friends of Canterbury Cathedral." T. S. Eliot's "Murder in the Cathedral," which had a vast subsequent commercial success, was one of these and Dorothy Sayers, the mystery writer, contributed another.

The success of Eliot in the field of poetic drama and the setting for which the present work was conceived are both to be considered in relation to "Thor, with Angels." For Fry's two current entries in our commercial theater, "The Lady's Not for Burning" and "Ring Round the Moon" have quite another purpose from the religious theme of his Canterbury tale.

Nor is it beside the point to observe that both writers were distinctly concerned with the Anglo-Catholic faith, Eliot having embraced the Church of England not long after he foreswore his American citizenship and Fry, born into a Quaker family, has followed his elder's interest in ecclesiastical drama by writing several other works with a religious theme. And there is surely food for reflection in noting that both "Murder in the Cathedral" and now the Fry work have both attracted the interest of our eminent Roman Catholic University.

Fry is telling of a family man who shocks wife, children and in-laws by doubting the old Norse gods and receiving the new faith which Augustaine has just introduced into England. How something held him back from hurling his sword into a young Briton after the latter had killed an elder of the old faith and how the young Briton's crucifixion on a tree lights an inner faith in the uncertain father in the story of this sixth century conversion.

It is told in verse with glints of humor; Fry emphasizes how there was in the old Norse church the same hollow gentility that weakens the religious appeals of our own day.

The C. U. production, under Leo Brady's direction, suffers from a heavy hand. The key to Fry, in his religious as well as his lay works, is, it seems to me, a lightness and airiness which is completely lacking in the present production.

Fry's value to the modern theater is that he is trying to bring light and air into the drama after decades that have been increasingly concerned with realistic problems. Reality seems to have reached a saturation point and Fry's offering to us is an exultant glory in imagination.

Inappropriate Heaviness

The lack of this understanding, I think, is why there is a heaviness to the C. U. production. For deftness, Brady has substituted a kind of broad sincerity, a result, perhaps, of natural temerity, but nonetheless, wholly inappropriate to the task.

For while I don't think Fry has written an especially fine play, certainly nothing in the rank of "Murder in the Cathedral," he has not written the kind of play which Brady seems to think it is. He has given, for instance, some amusing lines to Merlin of the old Round Table legends: "I bless you from the bottom of my slowly budding grave." "I shall move myself into the crumbling tower for an hour or two of quiet obliteration"—sleep, "that rule well where shadows walk over their heads." Bill Callahan reads these wittily chosen words, with heavy precision, losing their crisp freshness in thick slices of ham.

This unfortunately heavy tone hampers all in the cast, though William Flaherty, as the baffled father; Bob Waters, as the boyish Briton, and Rosemary Krill, as the daughter, sometimes get what I suspect is the desired effect.

While I don't deny that Father Gilbert V. Hartke's ever-assured students are giving us an interesting exercise and that the theme of the play is of a special nature, I do think the occasion of Washington's first hearing of this new voice of the poetic drama has suffered from a lack of understanding in what the writer is trying to do. The sunshine is in shade.

"THOR, WITH ANGELS." The Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University, Father Gilbert V. Hartke, head, presents a play by Christopher Fry. Staged by Leo Brady. Settings and lighting by James Waring. Costumes designed by Joseph Lewis, executed by Anne Tacik. At the campus theater through December 16.

German Arms Pact Is Near, Shinwell Says

WINGATE, England, Dec. 3 (AP). British Defense Minister Emanuel Shinwell today said an agreement on German rearmament will be concluded in a few days.

He said that would quickly be followed by appointment of a supreme commander for Western forces, a position for which Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has been mentioned.

Shinwell did not give any details, but there was an inference drawn from his speech that the French have modified their objections on the extent of German rearmament

The United States, Britain and other Atlantic Pact powers have favored a stronger German contribution to Western Europe's defense than have the French.

Shinwell declared the situation in Korea is "very grim indeed" and said Britain tried to convince the United States "whatever happens we should not do anything to bring us in conflict with China."

He said he would not criticize General MacArthur because it is "very difficult to understand the position of the commander on the spot."

He added, however, "at the moment it would appear that General MacArthur went beyond the objectives which we understood to be the objectives at the beginning of the affair and that as a result we went up too near the Manchurian border where there was a very large force of Chinese.

"Well, there may be far too many of them. Perhaps his intelligence was at fault. The position looks very grim indeed."

ECA Funds Planned for Far East

The Administration has asked Congress to authorize increased economic aid of up to 100 million dollars in the area around China, Senator Connally (D., Tex.) disclosed yesterday.

Connally told a reporter that on Tuesday he will lay before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee a proposal of the Economic Cooperation Administration (ECA) for authority to transfer 5 percent of its European funds to Asia.

The committee begins hearings today on a Presidential proposal to make 36 million dollars in food-aid available to Yugoslavia, which has broken with Moscow but still maintains a Communist government.

Connally said he has been informed that immediate ECA plans call for the use of only about 35 million dollars of the proposed Far East aid, with the remainder serving as a reserve for any emergencies.

The Texas Senator said he hasn't been informed in detail yet about where the bulk of the aid would be distributed.

Immediate Wage-Price Curbs Urged

By the United Press

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), chairman of the Senate-House Economic Committee, called yesterday for immediate imposition of wage and price controls.

He said it is "blindness" to think they can be avoided and should be put into effect at once —"the sooner the better." He added a warning that President Truman's new 18-billion-dollar emergency rearmament program "cannot be enacted without stern checks on inflation."

O'Mahoney made his statement to the United Press in the face of a plea by War Mobilization Chief W. Stuart Symington that present credit curbs and materials controls be given a fair chance before wage-price checks are imposed. He predicted the Nation will not feel the real impact of the defense program for about four months.

Congressional committees open a series of investigations this week to determine the effect of controls and to decide whether new ones should be approved.

Deal Reported On Stepinac

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Dec. 3 (U.P.).—A government-approved delegation of Yugoslav Roman Catholics is in Rome trying to negotiate with the Vatican for the release of Archbishop Alois Stepinac and a general church-state agreement, usually reliable sources reported tonight.

[High Vatican sources tonight denied reports that a three-man Roman Catholic delegation from Yugoslavia has negotiated with Vatican authorities on behalf of Marshal Tito for the release of Archbishop Alois Stepinac.]

Informants said the three-man delegation, headed by Canon Maric of Zagreb and including two theology professors from the Zagreb Seminary, went to Rome early last month.

Before their departure, they were briefed by Msgr. Rittig, minister without portfolio in the Croation government and spokesman for the Roman Catholics who cooperate with Marshal Tito's "Independent Communist" regime.

The ostensible purpose of their visit was to attend the Marian Congress which was scheduled to start at the end of November.

Redskins Beat Steelers, 24-7; Dudley Runs 96 Yds.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

AND SO THE LAMBS slaughtered the butcher up in Philadelphia Saturday. Municipal Stadium was to be the abattoir in which great big, unbeaten Army would stick and then rend the flock from Annapolis. But something happened to the script. The Middies suddenly spouted fire, brimstone and a complete unwillingness to cooperate, and stomped out of there with the butcher's side.

Navy demonstrated right away that it was willing to play rough, even with an Army team that was in the habit of racking up little boys suspected of wanting to cause trouble. Early in the first quarter, after Dave Bannerman of Navy had been run far out of bounds, one individual segment of the Army line banged into the unsuspecting Bannerman for keeps.

POVICH

Only it wasn't for keeps. Bannerman, properly indignant, got up off the sod and on his way up caressed his tormentor with a solid right cross to the mouth, as long as Army wanted to play that way. The officials wisely, or otherwise, turned their heads or didn't see it, or perhaps philosophized that boys will be boys.

Anyway, it was noticed that Navy was quite unawed by Army this day, and was declining no issue that boiled down to ferocity. It didn't develop as a dirty football game, merely ferocious, and in that kind of a league Navy protected itself nicely.

WHEN EDDIE ERDELATZ, whose coaching magic with the Navy defenses had held Army's ball-carriers to a mere net gain of 3 yards in the first half, trailed his boys into the dressing room at the intermission, he made a speech that was somewhat heretical for a Navy man.

"You know what the score is," he said. He was referring to their 14-0 lead. "There's still a second half. Do you want to be known as a first-half football team? I don't want to be known as a first-half coach. And I'm not going to give you a lot of that dear-old-blue-and-gold, win-for-Navy stuff."

"Go ahead out there in that second half and win for yourselves, and Navy will like you just as much. You are lucky guys to have this kind of an opportunity to pull the biggest upset of the year. All you need from now in, is the desire. And if you didn't have it you wouldn't be in front now. I'm pretty proud of you now. So is Navy. Just make sure you stay proud of yourselves."

ERDELATZ'S OWN comportment at the finish was a lesson in modesty. The sensational pass defenses that he had given Navy—only six completions in 24 attempts by Army, and four interceptions—caused a visiting coach to comment that "Navy must have stolen their signals, especially on some of those Army spot passes they grabbed."

Navy's pass defense was a joy, Erdelatz admitted. "But our kids made it work for themselves. They did it by showing they could stop Army on the ground. When you know a team has to pass, that's when your pass-defense ought to look good."

Before the game, Army Coach Earl Blaik was completely unmoved by the complaint of a Navy man that Erdelatz doesn't have two platoons—that no fewer than six Navy men would play the whole game. "Huh," said Blaik, "and if I had tackles like that Fritz Davis and Walt Gragg who are down there at Annapolis, they could play 60 minutes for Army, too. Let us not kid ourselves about that Navy personnel."

Which is a reminder that all season, Erdelatz had been telling his Navy lads the same thing—that they were good football players. They won their big game for a coach who had taken the raps for their six previous defeats.

THERE HAD BEEN a bit of deceit, though. Where were those single-wing plays Erdelatz said he had installed? Navy struck strictly to its T. "The story got out," laughed the Navy coach, "and if it would help distract Army I didn't mind. But I never intended to use any single-wing stuff."

No doubt Army had no less of the wild desire to win than Navy, but there were a couple of sequences that were significant. In the first quarter, on fourth down on its own 29, Navy gambled and made a first down. In the second quarter with Navy in front 7-0, and Army on the Navy 39, fourth down and 2, Army played it strangely close to the vest, and punted.

The Navy kids thought they won the ball game in the first 5 minutes when they lost the ball on a fumble on their own 22. This was it, for the 20-point underdogs, and four downs later that Army power had advanced the ball exactly 2 yards. Perhaps the Navy lads are right, and football games are won before either side scores.

STEELERS CLICK ON PASS—Pittsburgh Steeler Charlie Mehelich goes up high to snag a pass from teammate Joe Gasparella in the second quarter of yesterday's game with the Washington Redskins at Pittsburgh. Covering Mehelich is Redskin Harry Dowda. The completed pass was good for 19 yards, but the Redskins went on to win the game, 24-7

Bill Kicks Six Points, Baugh Tosses Touchdown

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 3. — The Redskins won another football game today and even harder to believe is the fact that it wasn't against the Baltimore Colts.

In the ankle-deep mud of snow-banked Forbes Field, the Washingtonians threw goo and a 24-7 defeat into the face of the Pittsburgh Steelers before 19,741 witnesses.

The upset triumph extended the Redskins' winning streak to its longest run since the exhibition season—two in a row. It gave them a season's record of three victories—two against the hapless Colts—and eight defeats.

For the Steelers, who were 7-point favorites, it was defeat No. 6 against five wins.

Dudley Dashes 96 Yards

Sammy Baugh, going the route at quarterback, for the second straight week, and Bill Dudley, who was a hero in these parts four years ago, engineered the Redskins' victory.

Bullet Bill streaked 96 yards with a punt return for a first quarter touchdown, kicked a 13-yard field goal in the second quarter and converted after all three Redskins' touchdowns for a 12-point afternoon.

Baugh, a master at tossing a wet football, pitched a 34-yard scoring pass to Eddie Saenz and also passed the Redskins 63 of the 75 yards they moved for their fourth period touchdown. Fullback Rob Goode climaxed the drive by barrelling over from the 5-yard line.

Blanked 24-0, the Steelers didn't get their only touchdown until the last seven minutes of the game. It came on a 64-yard pass play from Joe Geri to End Elbe Nickel.

Redskins Hound Steelers

Until the last period, when they showed their only offense of the gray day, the Steelers were being hounded to death on the gooey field by the Redskins. Of the 119 yards the Steelers gained on the ground, 69 came in the abortive last quarter rally.

When the 'Skin lineman missed a Steeler runner, Chuck Draenovich, Dudley, Hall Haynes and Ed Quirk came up from the secondary to smear the Pittsburghers in the sloppy going.

Geri, Bobby Gage and company completed only eight of their 31 passes. They had seven intercepted, two staving off Steeler touchdown bids.

STATISTICS
Washington	Pittsburgh
12	First downs
167	Passing yardage
83	Rushing yardage
25	Passes attempted
13	Passes completed
2	Passes intercepted
10	Punts

Early in the game, the Redskins learned they wouldn't be able to run in the mud and against that man-eating Steeler line, which yielded only 83 yards on the ground, so they entrusted their offense to Baugh. And the 36-lear-old slinger didn't fail 'em. He completed 13 of the 23 he tried for 250 yards and had only one intercepted.

Five of the passes the Slinger connected on were thrown after he shifted the Redskins into a short punt formation offense. And from that same attack, Baugh surprised the Steelers with a 46-yard quick kick in the third quarter to set them back on their heels after they had lost the ball on downs on the Washington 13-yard line.

Dudley Loses No Time

Dudley, who was late showing up for the kickoff because of an adjustment to his shoulder pads in the dressing room, made his presence felt shortly after he got into the lineup, however.

He legged back Joe Geri's second punt of the ball game 96 thrilling yards to give the Redskins a lead they increased as the mud battle sloshed on. Bill took the ball a la Joe DiMaggio—over his shoulders on the Redskins' four—only inches from the out-of-bounds line.

The Steelers, thinking Dudley had stepped out of bounds, didn't give chase until Bullet Bill had streaked 20 yards. They took out after him then but the Redskin blockers knocked them down as fast as they could find them and Dudley continued his trek without being touched.

It was the longest punt return in Redskins' history.

He drew a quick breath, kicked the extra point and the Redskins were ahead, 7-0, with less than six minutes of the game history.

The Steelers, who had made only one first down in the first quarter, were doing just about as well in the second quarter when the Redskins struck again. This time it was an 87-yard excursion.

Baugh Tosses Touchdown

Four Baugh passes moved them to the Steelers' 34 where it was first down. Baugh went back to pass, saw that he was about to b tackled and ran wide toward right end. He stopped, faked a toss to his right and then rifled the ball into the waiting arms of Saenz in the end zone for the touchdown.

Two minutes later, after Quirk had intercepted a pass on the Steeler 28, the Redskins upped their lead to 17-0. They went to the 5-yard line where it was fourth and two to go for a first down. Dudley then dropped back and booted a 13-yard field goal to

10,000 Welcome Middies

Annapolis Goes Wild Over Navy

By Whitney Shoemaker

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 3 (AP).—The heart of the Navy opened wide today for its returning football heroes in a celebration that shivered this town's colonial timbers.

Thousands cheered, sirens screamed, fire bells clanged and the whole capital went slightly gaga when Navy's football team arrived home from the sack of West Point.

Annapolis pulled off the wraps for its greatest celebration since V-J Day. It was a royal "welcome home" for the squad that submerged Army, 14-2, in Philadelphia yesterday.

Bells were still ringing at the Naval Academy after dark tonight.

Erdelatz Rings the Bell!

ANNAPOLIS, Dec. 4 (U.P.).—The victorious Navy team came home today after defeating Army 14-2 and plunged into one continuous round of celebrations. Among another things the team was taken to the site of the Academy victory bell where each man on the squad was to get 14 tugs on the lanyard.

The Middies yelled for Coach Eddie Erdelatz, the smiling civilian who guided them to one of their greatest victories.

Blushing deeply Erdelatz grabbed the rope and jerked so hard it broke.

It seemed like a fitting climax to Navy's great weekend.

Following custom, they had been beaten heartily since the game ended, with only a few intervals for a change of shifts during the night.

There were dents in the Japanese bell and the bell from the Carrier Enterprise, both of which had been lugged from their customary berths to the steps of Bancroft Hall.

"I'm just so doggone happy I'm ready to bust," team captain Tom Bakke said at the rally in Tecumseh Court.

OLD TECUMSEH himself, the bronze figurehead from the old Battleship Delaware, grinned down upon the brigade of 3700 midshipmen and hundreds upon hundreds of townspeople who gathered there. Midshipmen artists already had turned Tecumseh's usually dour face into a smiling one.

Vice Admiral Harry W. Hill, academy superintendent, rode into town with the squad and coaches in a parade before an estimated 10,000 persons that began at the Ritchie Memorial overlooking the Severn bridge entrance into Annapolis.

"My greatest kick came in meeting some of the Army people after the game and hear them saying to me, 'Well, wait 'til next year,'" Hill confessed.

He referred to scores of messages which had come from all over the world since the game, many of which were read at the rally.

"We are more than we seem to be here within our four walls.

Rams Blast Packers, 51-14; Go Into Lead

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3 (AP).—The Los Angeles Rams struck the Green Bay Packers numb with a 51-14 victory here today and went into first place in the National Conference of the National Football League, a half game ahead of the Chicago Bears.

The Rams heard the news of the Chicago Cardinals' 20-10 triumph over the Bears just before taking the field in front of 39,323 fans out here. So the Rams proceeded to blast the Packers into submission and write a host of new offensive records into the league book.

The Rams will play the Bears here December 17 if the Bears defeat Detroit next week. Today's game ended the regular season for Los Anegeles.

Green Bay held the Rams scoreless for the first quarte and posted the first touchdown themselves midway in the second. Halfback Floyd Reid of Georgia set the score up with a 57-yard run. Paul Christman passed for the final 8 yards to End Bob Mann.

That ended Green Bay's scoring until late in the final quarter. During the interim, the Rams exploded for seven touchdowns and a safety to thrash the visitors.

Quarterback Norm Van Brocklin threw three touchdown strikes; his alternate, Bob Waterfield rang up two more, and the other two tallies came via the ground.

Los Angeles scored two touchdowns plus a safety on a blocked punt in the second quarter, iced the game with three touchdowns

Hardy's Pass To Paul in 4th Period Wins It

By Jerry Liska

CHICAGO, Dec. 3 (AP). — The Chicago Cardinals rallied for 10 last-period points and a 20-10 upset of the Chicago Bears, who were striving to clinch a division tie on the National Football League, before 31,919 shivering fans at Comiskey Park today.

Quarterback Jim Hardy of the Cardinals outclassed the Bears' Johnny Lujack in passing and play-calling to hand the Bruins their first setback against eight victories.

Hardy's 35-yard scoring pass to Don Paul, who made a sensational catch on the Bear two, was the clincher midway in the fourth period. Ventan (Yabbo) Yablonski booted a 26-yard field goal in the closing minutes as added insurance.

Hardy had scored on a short quarterback sneak in the second period to give the Cardinals a 10-0 lead. The Bears came back with 10 points, all scored by Lujack, but failed to maintain a 10-10 deadlock in the final period.

The Bears had scored an earlier 27-6 win over the Cardinals and rated two touchdowns betting favorites in today's game played in 26-degree weather.

The game's turning point probably came early in the fourth period when halfback George McAfee of the Bears filched a Hardy pass in midfield and had clear sailing to a touchdown. However, he dropped the ball after a stride

Giants Rout Yanks; Browns Top Eagles

Conerly Tosses Two Scores, Runs 50 Yds. In 51-to-7 Romp

By Murray Rose

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP).—Chuckin' Charley Conerly, staging his greatest performance since his college days at Mississippi, paced a hard-hitting New York Giants team to a crushing 51-7 victory over the New York Yanks today.

The win enabled the Giants to maintain their first place tie with Cleveland in the American Division of the National Football League.

Thus the tingling title race was carried right down to the last day of the regular season. The Giants and Cleveland, which beat Philadelphia today, each have 9-2 records. The Giants will wind up their campaign against the Eagles in Philadelphia next week while the Browns finish against the Redskins at Washington.

In the likely event of a tie, the Giants and Browns will meet in a playoff at Cleveland, December 17.

Conerly, almost completely overshadowed the past few weeks by the sensational play of Rookie Travis Tidwell, moved right back into the limelight today with his brilliant handling of the Giants' offense.

Conerly, a passing sensation from the single wing, tossed air bombs for two touchdowns, set up

Groza's 35, 43-Yard Field Goals Keeps Cleveland Tied for 1st

By Dick Smith

CLEVELAND, Dec. 3 (AP).—Lou Groza's two field goals for 35 and 43 yards enabled the Cleveland Browns to whip the Philadelphia Eagles, 13 to 7, today in a rough and cautious battle of defenses.

A crowd of 37,490 watched the Browns' victory, which keeps them in a tie with the New York Giants at the top of the National Football League's American Conference.

Groza's field goals broke a record of 11 set by Paddy Driscoll with the Chicago Cardinals in the drop-kicking days of 1925.

"Toe" Groza has 12 field goals and six missed attempts so far this season, even though a new league rule bans the ground tape strip he used to line up his boots so effectively in four All-America Conference seasons.

A muddy field in a hard rain kept both offensives from functioning effectively. Until their last quarter touchdown drives, the

Lions Wallop Colts, 45-21; Box Scores 4 Times on Passes

By George Bowen

BALTIMORE, Dec. 3 (AP)—Cloyce Box, a big and exceptionally fast end, ran the Baltimore Colts secondary dizzy to catch four touchdown passes and lead the Detroit Lions to a 45-21 National Football League victory today.

Box, a halfback last year, and Doak Walker scored all the Detroit points. The former star from SMU went over for two touchdowns, kicked a 42-yard field goal and converted after all six touchdowns.

Bobby Layne threw three of the scoring passes to Box and Fred Enke the other.

The Colts put up a stubborn fight until the third quarter, tying the score at 14-all shortly after the second half opened. But the Lions were stung into two quick touchdowns and Walker's field goal then, to pull away 31-14 and their sixth triumph in 11 games.

The Lions struck for two touchdowns in two minutes of the second quarter after scoreless opening period before 12,059 fans in Memorial Stadium.

Box took a 31-yard pass from midfield and continued on to the end zone. The irrrepressible end then recovered a Baltimore fumble on the 24-yard line on the ensuing kickoff, took a pass from Lane on the 8 and Walker went over from there.

Y. A. Tittle threw the first of his two touchdown passes to Hal Crisler to make it 14-7 at the half. He duplicated at the start of the third quarter to knot the count.

On the first play after the kickoff, the Layne-Box aerial combination bulled a 66-yard scoring trick and the Lions were off to the races.

Browns Beat Eagles, 13-7

Eagles never got inside the Browns' 42.

The Browns' one touchdown came on a 30-yard run by Warren Lahr after he intercepted an Eagle pass on the third play after the opening kickoff.

The second defeat by the Browns was a bitter pill for Coach Earle (Greasy) Neale and his NFL champions for the past two seasons, in addition to maintaining the prestige of the Browns and the defunct AAC, it removed the Eagles from their last slim chance at the playoff.

The Eagles' one touchdown push came late in the final quarter. It carried 54 yards and included five completed passes by Quarterback Tommy Thompson, three of them good to Jack Ferrante for first down.

Jim Parmer plunged over from the two for the touchdown.

The touchdown that started the Browns off in front came after only a minute and 20 seconds of play.

Left halfback Lahr, who came to the Browns from Western Reserve last season, picked off a pass by Thompson intended for Steve Van Buren on the Eagles' 30-yard line.

Lahr dashed down the sideline and into the end zone without a Philadelphia tackler touching him.

Barclay Hurts Knee Playing Ping Pong Game

LEXINGTON, Va., Dec. 3 (AP).—On the eve of Washington and Lee's initial workout for the Gator Bowl game with Wyoming, the Generals tonight lost the services of Head Football Coach George Barclay indefinitely.

Dr. Reid White, jr., W&L team physician, put the Generals' coach to bed tonight with a severe knee injury. W&L begins practice tomorrow for its New Year's Day engagement in Jacksonville, Fla.

While playing ping pong at a friend's home a week ago, Barclay had his knee slip out of joint. He waited until today to see Dr. White, who said the condition had been aggravated to the danger point.

GW Meets N. C. State On Thursday

Area basketball fans have a bumper crop of thrills awaiting them this week.

Georgetown University unveils its sophomore crew for the first time Tuesday night; Southern Conference champion North Carolina State invades Uline Arena Thursday to oppose George Washington in its season opener, and a busy schedule puts all other area teams in action.

Plenty of scouts will be on hand at Uline Arena tomorrow night to take a peek at the Hoyas' 13 sensational sophomores who won 16 games last season as freshmen against only one defeat.

All five Georgetown starters may be sophs and Captain Dan Supkis will be lucky if he sees much action as the Hoyas tackle Geneva College.

Juniors who may get into the act include Tony Durmowicz, Mike Vitale and Dan O'Leary.

Most of the Hoya sophs are are former outstanding New York City high stars who followed Coach Francis (Buddy) Grady to Georgetown when he took over as coach at Georgetown last year.

"The boys look great in practice but none of them has ever been in a varsity game before. I don't know what they will do when the pressure is on," he said. "Potentially we have one of the best ball clubs we have ever had."

Whatever worries O'Grady may have, they are small indeed compared to the care which knits the brow of George Washington Coach Bill Reinhardt.

Reinhardt opens against North Carolina State, which is about as loaded with talent as it is possible for a basketball team to get. The Wolfpack has won the Southern Conference title three years in a row and figures to be one of the best teams in the Nation this season.

G.W. has four regulars back from last year, however, and will give N.C. State a fight. Ray Adler, Bud Goglin, Art Cerra, and Gene Witkin were starters last year who are back.

Two Mason-Dixon Conference games are on tonight's schedule. American University, which shapes up as the area's toughest team after whipping the powerful Quantico Marines and Jack Nichols, 68-57, Saturday night, takes on the Towson Teachers at American U., while Catholic University travels to Mount St. Mary's.

SOME MIDDIES CAME PREPARED—At least some of the 102,000 people who came to Philadelphia to see the big service clash had the idea maybe way back in their mind that Navy wouldn't do too badly. After the incredible score: Navy 14, Army 2, was flashed to an unbelieving world, these never-say-die Midshipmen brought this banner out of hiding

Annapolis Stages All-Out Celebration

We represent a lot," Hill said.

Coach Eddie Erdelatz, his voice cracking, murmured a few words of gratitude to the team and all the academy.

TO THE BRIGADE he said, "It's about time you gave yourselves a big hand, because you don't know the meaning of the word quit either."

Bakke, Quarterback Bob Zastrow, who figured in all the scoring yesterday, and Halfback Frankie Hauff all spoke a few words to the wildly cheering brigade.

All the team rang the "Big E" bell 14 times as the brigade shouted the numbers to indicate the number of points Navy scored.

Bakke started it off. The Admiral got in his licks, too. Erdelatz tugged so lustily the rope broke on his seventh peal. He went up to 14 by hand.

Eight fire trucks, two ambulances and half a dozen cars with Academy and local officials preceded the three buses parading into town. Mayor Roscoe C. Rowe, sporting a cowboy hat with a Navy badge, directed traffic at the Ritchie Memorial.

Even neighboring St. John's College, which shuns intercollegiate athletics, joined in. A sign painted on one building proclaimed, "Even We Congratulate You."

THE NAVY ACADEMY band, one of a half-dozen units which blared welcome home music, staged an advance parade of its own. One bandsman, J. C. Siemans of Tulsa, Okla., disguised in an Army uniform, rode a mule down King George st. huddled in disgrace.

Placards fore and aft identified him as "Col. Blaik, U. S. Cavalry."

Bandsmen said the donkey, hired out for the occasion, was consigned for a glue factory tomorrow.

Effigies bearing Army symbols rode in the ambulances. Midshipmen had contrived a small casket draped in black with the tablet, "Young Blaik."

(Colonel Blaik is the Army coach; young Bob Blaik, his son, is Army's quarterback.)

Bakke told Plebes the team had voted after the game and decided that "first year men can carry on until Christmas." That means many of the regulations will be suspended, and plebes will be regarded as almost human for the next month.

A signed plastered on the front of Bancroft Hall read:

"Somewhere birds are singing,
"Somewhere children shout,

Navy's Win Called Tonic For Football

By Will Grimsley

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 3 (AP).—Harry Stuhldreher, the balding one-time "little general" of Notre Dame, sees Navy's 14-2 upset of Army as a tonic for college football.

"It just proves that any representative team can go out and lick any other team on a given Saturday," the 49-year-old former Wisconsin coach said today. "It's a healthy situation."

Stuhldreher said the oft-battered Middies trounced the mighty Cadets because they were "hungry and more eager."

"They were sharp and alert," he added. "They outrushed Army all day. They pounced on every opportunity. Army let some pass. A team fired up like that is hard to beat.

"The day of one or two teams dominating college ball, I think, is over. We have reached a stage of remarkable balance. I don't think the game has ever been more unpredictable.

"I saw Ohio State. That is a great club. Yet Michigan went out and beat them without a first down or a completed pass. Michigan did it on two blocked kicks.

"SOUTHERN METHODIST and Michigan and Pennsylvania — they're all good teams, but they've had plenty of slumps.

"I think it's because the boys who were in service have now all graduated and we're getting a new set of impressionable young men who can be aroused. The vets naturally didn't react to pep talks."

Eddie Erdelatz, pug-faced young coach of the Middies, figures a bad Navy break as the real turning point of the game.

"That was at the very start when we fumbled and Army recovered on our 22. Our boys gritted their teeth and said, 'Don't worry, coach, they're not going anywhere.' They didn't either and I knew then—and so did the boys—that we could lick the Army."

GREASY NEALE, coach of the Philadelphia Eagles, and Steve Owen, coach of the New York Giants, both offered Erdelatz special plays for the Army game.

"I didn't use any of their stuff, though," the former assistant coach of the San Francisco 49ers said. "We had four new plays, and they were some we dug up ourselves."

One of Navy's unsung heroes was Halfback Frank Hauff, who played 58 of the 60 minutes and gained 61 yards on plunges. He was a stickout on both offense and defense—unusual in this day of two-platoon football.

Army's coach, Earl Blaik, came out of it all as a first class prophet. He contended from the beginning Navy's material made the team a potential giant.

Stonewalls Win, Finish Unbeaten

The Stonewalls closed their football season unbeaten yesterday by defeating the Georgetown Eagles, 12-7, on the Ellipse for their seventh straight victory.

Dynamite, Cooper Fight Here Tonight

Jimmy Cooper, Washington's top featherweight, meets a challenger from his home ground tonight when he takes on Little Dynamite in a 10-round main event at Turner's Arena.

The bout has been sanctioned by the District Boxing Commission for the featherweight championship of the District. Tonight's card marks the fifteenth anniversary of boxing at Turner's.

Cooper is favored over his solidly-built rival on the strength of several victories this year. Cooper decisioned Charley Titone and Rudy Pasco, and knocked out Don Bowman. Two years ago he won a decision over Bantamweight Champ Manuel Ortiz.

Little Dynamite is a rugged scrapper built along the general lines of a tank, however. Whether Cooper's punches will have much effect on him is a matter to be seen. Last week Dynamite won over Pat Thomas in five rounds.

Tonight's supporting card has three fve-rounders and two four-rounders. The five-round bouts are Bernard Barksdale, local lightweight, vs. Kenny Leach, Baltimore; Coffee Wilkins, D. C. featherweight, vs. Joey Longo, Baltimore, and Eddie Gilchrist, local featherweight vs. Mexican Aguilta Aquilar.

Middleweights Gene Kelly and George Brooks will meet in one four-rounder whirl, another will open the show at 8:45 p. m.

Furr, Silas Stage Boxing Exhibition

To celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of boxing at Turner's Arena tonight, Phil Furr and Sid Silas who fought the first main eventer at Turner's will be honored guests. The pair will "fight" a special three-round exhibition.

When Furr and Silas fought back in 1935 it was for the District welterweight championship. Furr won in 13 rounds.

Western Branch Wins Two Titles In Boys Club Play

The Western Branch of the Washington Boys' Club won both the 105 and the 120 pound football championships of the Boys Club league yesterday at Taft Playground.

Western defeated Eastern, 15-0, in the 120-pound class when Bob Donaldson and Darrell Herman scored touchdowns and Buck Monaghan nailed Bud Smith in the end zone for a safety.

DEAR FOLKS:

Sam Palumbo has ridden more winners over this track than any other jockey. However, Buddy Root holds the record for a single season. He piloted 73 in 1943 and came back the following year to ring up 71 victories. Root will be in action at this meeting. Dick Lawless, now a full-fledged jockey, will make his first saddle appearance in this area for a long time. He did well in New England during the summer and fall. Ray Haight will handle the pubic address system and will air two races a day over Station WGAY on Cluck Dulane's program. Increased betting facilities in the clubhouse will be welcomed by the fans. See you at the rail and at the pump. BILL.

Weather Man Heads Field In Inaugural

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, scene of racing in pre-Revolutionary War days, and a modern 6-furlong turf plant since 1933, begins the final phase of the 1950 Eastern season today with the first of 18 programs carrying through to December 23.

Although it annually is the opinion of the track's publicity man that Charles Town has better horses and riders than ever, this time he is correct.

The West Virginia course has a strong representation of the stables which competed through the Maryland big-time season and also boasts a majority of jockeys from the top-flight tracks.

Today's feature is the Inaugural Purse, a sprint of 6½ furlongs for 3-year-olds, none of which made stake-race history this year. However, they are nicely made — and should provide some sizzling competition.

Weatherman, Miss Prime, Hy and Annie's Dream are in the field along with Bachelor Belle, Paintandpowed and others. Weatherman, at 115 pounds, shares top weight with Bachelor Belle. The lightweight of the group is Bridle Path, coupled with Miss Prime, who will carry 106.

The jockey colony will include many of the standbys of other meetings: Willie Downs, Buddy Root, George Cardoza, Patsy Grant and others.

The two boys expected to top the riders are Nick Shuk, who was second to Joe Culmone at Bowie with a string of longshots, and Darrell Hartley, the Canadian apprentice sensation who led the "bug" boys at the Prince Georges County oval.

Post time for the first race each day will be 1 p. m. with the races to be run at 20-minute intervals, insuring early completion of the programs. As usual the daily double will be on the first and second races and will close at 12:45 p. m.

GPO Springs Upset In Recreation League

The Government Printing Office basketball team upset Mt. Rainier, 36-34, yesterday in Prince Georges County Recreation Depart league play at the Hyattsville Armory. Eddie Kneeland scored 20 points for the winners.

In other games, Spug Harbor beat Mid Atlantic, 45-19, and the defending champions, Hyatt Buick, won over Colmar Manor, 49-29. Monday the GPO plays Hyattsville and Colmar Manor and Mid Atlantic tangle.

Dusty Cook 'Fair' After Auto Crash and an incomplete Cardinal pass was ruled.

When the Cards came back with a 66-yard scoring strike which paid off when Paul speared Hardy's 35-yard pass for a touchdown. Paul went high in the air on the Bear two and grabbed the ball from no fewer than three Bear defenders. Pat Harder, who had booted a 23-yard field goal in the first period, added his second extra point for a 17-10 Cardinal lead.

The Bears bogged down completely and the Cardinals sewed up the game with Yablonski's 26-yard field goal.

The first Cardinal touchdown in the second period was set up by Hardy's arching pass to End Bob Shaw which covered 54 yards before Shaw was slammed out of bounds on the Bear one. Two plays later, Hardy sneaked across the goal-line and Harder added for a 10-0 Cardinal lead.

A blocked punt led late in the second period, to the first and only Bear touchdown. Ray Bray blocked Hardy's boot and John Hoffman recovered for the Bears on the Cardinal one-yard line. Lujack added the point and the Bears trailed 10-7.

The Bears knotted the count at 10-all in the third when Lujack booted a 15-yard fielder after a Bear drive fizzled on the Cardinal three. That gave Lujack a season's bag of 109 points in his bid for the League scoring crown.

But the Cardinal's stirring finish ended any hopes that the Bears had of settling for a tie which would have helped considerably in their title bid.

Bob Williams Back in Hospital With Fracture

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 3. (AP)—Bob Williams, the Notre Dame quarterback, was returned to the hospital today after a re-examination of X-rays showed that an injury he suffered in Saturday's Southern California game is worse than doctors thought.

Team Physician Dr. Sherman Egan emphasized, however, that Williams' condition is not critical in any sense. Dr. Egan said he looked over the X-rays again this morning and discovered a fracture line in the eighth vertebra. Williams had been hospitalized for concussion.

"The boy is in no particular pain and was able to walk around today," Dr. Egan said. He added that a body cast is being applied and that Williams will remain in the hospital overnight.

D'Alonzo Stars in Win By Villanova

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 3 (AP). Hard-hitting Pete D'Alonzo pounded through the mud for two touchdowns today to give Villanova a 13 to 7 victory over St. Mary's in their intersectional football game here today before less than 200.

Playing in driving rain, weather conditions were the worst ever seen for a game played in Kezar Stadium. The contest was preceded by 24 hours of rain and the slanting downpour continued until the last few minutes. The field was inches deep in water and mud from goal to goal.

D'Alonzo, the Wildcats' 210-pound fullback, was an expert mudder, however. Early in the first period, he ducked through a line hole and chugged 50 yards for a touchdown.

Villanova	7	0	0	6	—13
St. Mary's	0	0	7	0	— 7

Villanova: Touchdowns — D'Alonzo (2). Conversions—Rilo (pass from Haner).
St. Mary's: Touchdowns — Johnson. Conversion—Johnson (on end run).

Loyola Comes Back To Beat Frisco, 40-28

LOS ANGELES, Dec 3 (AP).—Quarterback Don Klosterman and Fullback George Musacco carried Loyola of Los Angeles to one of its typical, come-from-behind football victories today. The Lions scored 13 points in the fourth quarter to whip University of San Francisco, 40-28, in their season finale.

San Francisco soared into a 28-13 lead shortly after the second half began but the comback enabled Loyola to post its ninth win in 10 games.

REDSKINS—From P. 12

Redskins Upset Steelers, 24-7; Bill Dudley Goes 97 Yards

give the winners a 17-0 halftime lead.

Midway the fourth period, the Redskins gave the scoreboard operator more work to do. Again it was Dudley who did his old team dirt. He intercepted a Gage pass on the Steeler 35 and five plays later, the Redskins scored again.

Baugh hit Clyde Goodnight for a 37-yard advance, Saenz and Goode moved the ball to the Steeler 31-yard line on two swift strikes at the line and then Baugh set up the tally by passing 26 more yards to Hugh Taylor on the Pittsburgh five. The hard-hitting Goode took it over on the first carry for the touchdown.

Convinced this wasn't Pittsburgh's day, fans began to swarm out of the park with about seven minutes left. They missed the Steelers' only score—a 64-yard pass from Geri to End Nickel, who had eluded Hall Haynes.

Longer Work Hours With Overtime Studied Instead of Pay Raises

Will longer working hours and overtime pay for Federal employes be pushed instead of cost-of-living pay raises?

It could easily happen if the international situation continues to worsen. Such a plan is known to have been discussed several days ago at a meeting of Federal officials whose advice is sought on major personnel policies.

These officials were unanimous in their belief that the pay bills now before Congress weren't the answer to the Federal pay problem. In general, these bills would boost salaries under $5000 by 17 percent and 8 percent over $5000. But the group was in agreement that something had to be done to offset the Federal employe's soaring living costs.

It was recalled that the pay problem for classified and postal employes was met during the first several years of World War II by placing them on a 6-day, 48-hour week, and by paying them extra for the sixth day. They also pointed out that many thousands of employes are today on overtime pay, while many more thousands work overtime without additional compensation.

They foresaw the ominous possibility of a deeper world crisis, of manpower shortages and an urgency that would force the Government and defense industries on a longer work week. In fact, some of them thought Government agencies should now be on longer hours, either 44 or 48 hours.

The present overtime pay law for classifieds provides full time-and- a-half for those employes whose basic pay is under $3000 annually, but overtime on a declining rate is paid to those who are paid more than $3000. The latter group is paid overtime on the first $3000 of their salary. That's all. The group conceded the overtime pay law would have to be made a bit more liberal so it could meet the present problem.

Navy Undersecretary Dan Kimball is reported to be considering an offer to be vice president of a major rubber company.

Senator Elbert Thomas (D., Utah), who was defeated for reelection, has the support of several of his colleagues to be appointed chairman of the Civil Service Commission. The Administration, however, has him slated for another post.

Senator Myers (D., Pa.), another "lame duck," has rejected several offers of high-ranking Government jobs. He plans to practice law.

James M. Verner, a hearing examiner, has been promoted to the new and powerful job of general manager of the Civil Aeronautics Board. His appointment is the first of many changes that will be made in the agency.

The State Department, of all things, has a pink cover on its latest departmental phone directory.

The executive council of the AFL's American Federation of Government Employes will meet here soon to name a president to succeed the late Henry C. Iler. These are among those discussed for the important post: John J. Smith of Philadelphia, a union vice president; Tom O'Malley of Labor's Wage and Hour Division in Chicago; George Riley, an AFL legislative representative, and Tom Walters, director of AFL's Government Employes Council.

W. H. Harrison, director of Commerce's National Production Authority, is making it a point to review the progress and objectives of his agency with his employes. The most recent session was held Friday. He will join with Commerce Secretary Sawyer in being hosts to NPA employes at a get-acquainted party to be held December 15 at the Press Club.

Chairman Harry McDonald of the Securities & Exchange Commission, has his 10 regional directors here today for a week of meetings on SEC's defense-related problems.

At Internal Revenue, these employes have received awards on their retirements for long and meritorious service: Helen S. Burlington, Charlotte Darrow, Nellie E. Desmond, Florence Hartman, Bertha M. Holmes, Marguerite Ison, Elizabeth Murray, Theodosia Rowles, Catherine Thomas and Lillian Terwilliger . . . at the Tariff Comission, Roland L. Lee has moved from Agriculture to be chief of its textiles divisions

Swan-Song About County Surplus Stirs Indignation

Prince Georges Election Victors Ask, How Come School Frugality?

The swan-song statement of the outgoing Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners that they will leave a surplus of almost a million dollars drew warm comment yesterday.

Factions that successfully opposed reelection of the Democratic board wanted to know why the surplus wasn't used to improve the county's schools.

"Wouldn't it have been better," asked Commissioner-elect H. Wilson Spicknall, "to have provided money for full-time classes instead of building up a surplus, like a hound dog burying a bone?"

Spicknall will be acting chairman of the board pending formal organization. The new, all-Republican board takes over Tuesday.

"County commissioners cut the appropriations for schools, libraries and recreation programs on the premise that they didn't have enough money," said Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff, president of the County League of Women Voters. "Now we find we have a surplus."

In a statement Saturday, President Harry W. McNamee of the commissioners said the board was "proud to relinquish management of (the county) government in its present excellent condition."

McNamee pointed out that the board's school program has 14 schools or additions under construction, with funds fully available.

William R. Turner, member of the County Citizens Committee for Good Government, termed McNamee's statement "an attempt to confuse the public.

"The fact is," Turner said, "that last July 1 there was an unappropriated surplus of $1,378,000. Today there is $950,000 surplus. That is further proof that the policy has been to save up to influence an election.

"Part of the reason the board was able to build up a surplus was as the result of new building in the county that placed new property on the tax rolls. And yet the board did not allocate any of this additional money for schools."

"At the time the budget for the 1949-1950 fiscal year was prepared," Turner pointed out, "the school board asked for $2,333,000 and was given $2,000,000. The cut has meant half-time classes, P-TA's paying for phones, and so forth.

"Yet the surplus was being built up then. It doesn't add up."

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, spoke yesterday at an open house for 1000 guests at St. Vincent's Home and School on the 125th anniversary of the school's founding.

The school, at 4th and Channing sts. ne., is administered by the Sisters of Charity. They were assisted in greeting the guests by a committee of the women's auxiliary—Katherine Nally, president, Alvina Smith, Mrs. Raymond Dillon and Ethel Connor.

60 Civil Air Patrol Planes Hunt, Find Airliner 'Wreck'

Florida-bound from Harrisburg, Pa., a four-engine plane, with 31 passengers and a crew of four, "caught fire and crashed" somewhere in the Washington area early yesterday.

The crash occurred only in the imaginations of Civil Air Patrol officials for "Operation Search and Rescue." The CAP pilots had to find the wreck and direct ground rescue teams to the scene.

Wreckage, parachutes and "dummy" bodies had been placed on the ground at several points in the area before the mission started.

With headquarters established at Hybla Valley Airport outside Alexandria, the rescue operation began to roll.

About 60 planes of the National Capitol Wing of the CAP rose from eight airports in nearby Maryland and Virginia. Ground teams, with first-aid, evacuation and communications equipment, were alerted.

A few hours later, Douglas Funkhouser, 565 S. Washington st., Falls Church, flying with the Falls Church-Herndon-Fairfax squadron, spotted parachutes near Middleburg, Va. A ground team hurried to the scene.

Then two planes found the "wrecked" aircraft about 25 miles away, south of Manassas. It was spotted by Jack Bogle, 3627 Cumberland st. nw., and John Nagle, 2032 Belmont st. nw., flying in a private plane, and R. B. Butts, 104-40 Georgetown rd., Bethesda, and Wentworth Brace, 3718 Manor rd., Chevy Chase, operating a CAP plane.

Meanwhile, an actual plane crash had occurred in Orange County, Va., but the Richmond Wing of the CAP was handling it and requested no aid.

"Operation Search and Rescue" is a joint program of the Air Rescue Service, United States Air Force, and the CAP. The training program is the first in which both groups in the same locality work together.

The CAP, an official auxiliary of the USAF, is charged with aiding the Air Rescue Service on search and rescue missions. In yesterday's operation, the ARS had a special plane on hand. It could drop parachutists with medical supplies to a plane-crash area unreachable from the ground.

Elks' Lodge Ruler Held In Gambling

Silver Spring Club Raided; Wall Panel Broken in, Reveals Four Slot Machines

The exalted ruler of the Silver Spring Elks Lodge was arrested on two gambling charges after a "routine" Saturday check of Montgomery County clubs, county police revealed last night.

The night's work also netted nine slot machines and some punchboards, police reported.

Gray

Capt. G. W. Linthicum, chief of county detectives, said investigators arrested Exalted Ruler C. Robert Gray, who was present when, police said, they found four slot machines at the Elks Club on Fidler's la., in Silver Spring.

Gray, a real estate man whose address was given as 8904 Fairview rd., Silver Spring, was charged under a county gaming ordinance and under a State law forbidding "possession of gambling paraphernalia for the purpose of gambling."

He was released under $1000 bond for appearance in Trial Magistrate Court in Silver Spring December 19, Linthicum said.

Sergts. Carroll V. Miller and Glenn Wood, working out of the Silver Spring substation, searched the club and asked for a key to open a locked wall panel.

When no key was forthcoming, Linthicum said, the officers broke the lock and found the four machines inside, "practically new and filled with coins." They were not being played at the time.

In all, a dozen clubs were checked, and five other machines as well as some punchboards were confiscated, the detective chief said.

Rock Creek Road Closed

For about two weeks, Beach dr. —between Military rd. and Bingham dr. in Rock Creek Park—will be closed while Milkhouse Ford Bridge is repaired. Picknickers will be allowed to pass the barricades, but not to cross the ford.

Mechanic Faces 30 Charges Following Wild Chase in SW.

A harrowing chase in which two policemen fired eight shots, narrowly avoided injury and finally lost their man, brought 30 charges against a Southwest mechanic yesterday.

Arrested several hours after the chase, James H. Clark, 34, whose address was listed as 614 Maryland ave. sw., was charged with 15 counts of driving on the wrong side of the street, six counts of passing a stop sign, six counts of driving the wrong way on a one-way street, one of driving at an unreasonable rate of speed, and two counts of assault with a dangerous weapon (an auto).

Brown was released under $3000 bond for an appearance in court today. He denied the violations.

At about 11 p. m. Saturday, Privates L. A. Pinner and R. F. Brown of the Traffic Division, took after a 1941 sedan speeding west along Virginia ave. near 1st st. sw.

On 1st st. between D and E sw., Pinner said, he pulled alongside the auto, tried to flag it down. In response came a swerve which nearly forced him into the curb, Pinner said. The officer fired two shots but the auto kept going.

At 14th and F sts. sw., Brown pulled alongside the auto and shouted "stop." The auto turned into F st., forcing Brown into the curb, the officer reported. Brown emptied his six-shooter into the air, he said, but the auto sped on.

The pursuers lost the car at this point, 15 minutes after they began the zig-zag chase.

Several hours later, Privates Stephen D. Beach and Eldon E. Kitchen of the Traffic Division spotted an empty auto answering the police lookout at 6th st. and Maryland ave. sw.

They found a bullet hole in the right rear, and in the webbing of the rear seat, a spent bullet. The tags were registered to Clark, who was picked up at his residence. Called in, Brown identified Clark as the driver whom he had chased, police said.

7 Interested In Guy Mason Post on D. C. Commission

Appointment Up to Truman; Term of Incumbent Ends In February, 1951

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

At least seven Washingtonians would accept the District Commissionership now held by Guy Mason in the event that he is not appointed to a new term.

In the list are at least two close friends of Mason who would turn the job down rather than take it from a man they consider to be a courageous trouper.

The decision on who will get the next commissioner appointment is up to President Truman. All indications are that he has not yet made any decision on it. Expectations are that he will not make the decision until much closer to the February 2, 1951, expiration of Mason's third three-year term. (The term is elastic in that a commissioner serves three years "and until a successor is qualified.")

$13,000 a Year

The job pays $13,000 a year.

Mason wants to keep on. Twice in his Commissioner's career he fought his way back into service after brutal bouts with severe illness. The last, a heart attack and stroke in October, 1949, kept him home almost continuously seven months. Some of his closest associates view his current performance with mingled admiration for his comeback and misgivings over his health. He is 70.

The seven whose names are being circulated as possible successors to Mason are:

Renah F. Camalier, former Senate District Committee counsel.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, former president of the District Board of Education.

Finch On List

Wilbur S. Finch, former head of the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

Francis J. Kane, head of the Kane Transfer Co.

Adelbert W. Lee, real estate man and school board member.

Gerhard P. van Arkel, now counsel to the Senate District Committee.

Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, legislative chairman for the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Both Camalier and Mrs. Wright indicated they would decline the job rather than take it from

2 Injured In Northeast Home Fire

One occupant was burned and another suffered lacerations in a fire that drove a dozen residents of 321 E st. ne. into the street in their night clothes early yesterday.

Admitted to Casualty Hospital with first and second degree burns of his face, right hand and elbow was Patrick Hickey, 82.

The fire apparently started in his front room on the second floor and burned out into the hallway, police said. Hickey was carried out of the room by firemen.

Lindsey Blackburn, 40, was cut on the left hand and right arm when he attempted to break down the first floor rear door, according to police. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

The other occupants of the building, a two-story brick apartment house, fled safely to the street. According to police, the fire burned out Hickey's room and the hallway and damaged other rooms on the second floor. Police said there had been a party in Hickey's room several hours before the fire was discovered, about 1 a. m.

Front Counter Only Remains in Old Post Building

With the exception of the front counter's public service activities, all departments of The Washington Post today are in the Post's new home at 1515 L st. nw.

The personnel office is on the second floor of the new building and may be reached by the entrance closest to 15th st. The executive departments, for the time being, can also be reached by this entrance.

Until its quarters can be prepared, the front counter will remain at 1337 E st. nw., site of the old Post Building. This is where classified ads may be left, back papers purchased, and bills paid.

Police said the boat, owned by Brodsky, capsized about 2 p. m. and both men were in the water nearly half an hour before they were rescued by Harry A. Delenback of 8419 Piney Branch rd., Silver Spring, Md., who spotted them while cruising in his cabin cruiser.

Farr Away

Police Stop The Music; Singer Held

A night club comedian was arrested in the middle of his act at the Hilltop Restaurant in Coral Hills, Md., Saturday night on a charge of singing obscene songs and telling "dirty jokes", Prince Georges County police said yesterday.

The entertainer, Frankie Farr, 47, was charged with disorderly conduct, before Justice of the Peace J. R. Creecy in Suitland, Md. He posted $53.50 collateral for his appearance today in Marlboro Police Court.

Police Lieut. E. A. Turner said he had received numerous complaints about Farr's show and had sent two policemen to the restaurant at 5211 Marlboro rd. Thursday night to warn Farr and the restaurant owner.

Saturday evening he received another complaint, Turner said, so he went to the restaurant himself in time for the 11:30 p. m. show. He added that he heard 15 minutes of the entertainment and then hauled Farr away from the microphone in the middle of his act.

Turner said he is also concerned about the strip-tease dancers at some of the roadhouses in the county and has warned them to "wear more clothes."

Inquest Today Into Slaying In Pool Room

A coroner's inquest will be held today at 11:30 a. m. in the slaying of Algie Wilkerson, 38, who died Saturday night after he was struck in the Adam's apple with a billiard cue.

Wilkerson, who lived at 1611 O st. nw., was struck during a fight in a pool room at 1511 7th st. nw. shortly after 6 p. m., police said. He was pronounced dead at the scene. Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said he died of a crushed Adam's apple.

Police arrested Arthur S. Barnett, 33, of 1721 Corcoran st. nw., on a murder charge.

Police, meanwhile, continued their investigation of the slaying of Bernard L. Bradley, about 50, found dead in an alley in the rear of 366 Dixon st. sw, shortly before midnight Saturday.

Dr. Rosenburg said Bradley's throat had been slashed twice and he had been stabbed five times in the back and three times in the chest. Bradley was identified through papers in his pocket. Police listed his address as 716 F st. sw.

1 Shot, 1 Struck During Party; Host Accused

Police said Williams first struck Fowlks during the fight and was then shot with a 12-gauge shotgun held by Elmer E. Bernard, 30, host at the party.

Bernard later was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and released under $1000 bond for his appearance today in Municipal Court.

Israel's Minister Sounds Peace Hope

Moshe Sharett, Foreign Minister of Israel, expressed optimism yesterday that while the world situation is "very grim," he felt that "war not only can but will be averted."

However, he warned the 700 Jewish leaders at the Shoreham Hotel for the annual general assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds that steps must be taken to "consolidate the state of Israel while there is still time." He advised haste in removing the remaining Jewish immigrants from countries from which they can still escape."

David Ben Gurion, Israel's premier, recently expressed concerned over the Jews trapped behind the Iron Curtain.

Sharett urged aid to feed the starving countries of India and Yugoslavia, as a "humanitarian" gesture.

If given sufficient help, Israel will within three years become a self-supporting government, he said. Indicating that the government was entitled to "modest" economic aid, he cited their contributions "made to peace and stability of the Middle East by eliminating trouble spots."

The Minister, now representing Israel in the United Nations Assembly, spoke at the closing session of the ninteenth general assembly of the council.

The job is filled by the President's appointment, and his nominees must be approved by the Senate.

Supports van Arkel

Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said last night he has written to President Truman urging that Van Arkel be appointed to the job.

Van Arkel has been committee counsel through the past year. He was appointed counsel by Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.). A native of Iowa, he is a graduate of Princeton and of the Harvard law school. He worked in Federal agencies from 1934 until World War II, then served in Africa and Europe in assignments for the wartime Office of Strategic Services.

After the war he joined the legal staff of the National Labor Relations Board, and as general counsel in 1947 strongly opposed the Taft-Hartley bill. When it became law, van Arkel resigned, and entered private law practice.

Both Melvin D. Hildreth, Democratic national committeeman, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Democratic national committeewoman, for the District, said they had written indorsements of van Arkel to President Truman.

Time-Saving Beauty Tricks Are Plentiful

(Eleventh Day of Ruth's beauty program)

By Ann Lawrence

BECAUSE RUTH'S time for beauty must be capsuled in between myriad household tasks, we made a list for her of time-saving beauty devices.

For example—when stray ends of hair loose their curl and hang limply around her neck and face, —and there's no time for a complete set, she can wring out a piece of absorbent cotton in cologne. Then fold the damp cotton over each uncurled section of hair, sliding it from the roots out to the ends. Next, wind the section into a pin curl, just as with an ordinary set. Because cologne evaporates more quickly than water, the curl will dry in about fifteen minutes. This trick must be reserved for special occasions, however, as cologne will have a drying effect on the hair if used too frequently.

And here's an effective way to restore smudged make-up without re-doing the entire face: Wring out a piece of cotton in iced skin freshener, and remove smeared lipstick or caked powder foundation. Now press the cotton gently into the skin, but don't rub. Go over your forehead, around your nose and chin, the back of your neck. Allow the fresnener to dry, then powder lightly over your face. Freshen your lipstick, comb your hair and you've a brand new air and feeling!

ANOTHER HOUSEHOLD TRICK: Use baby lotion to remove stubborn grime that works its way down into fingernails, elbows, cuticles, etc. It's a grand skin softener, too. Again, use a piece of absorbent cotton, working the lotion into the dirt-studded area. Now with a clean wad of cotton, wipe off the excess lotion and watch the dirt come with it.

All steamed up after a trying day around the house?

Restore the color to your checks and a glow to your disposition with a steam-up facial. Here's how Ruth learned to do it: Remove your make-up and massage cleansing or softening cream over your face and neck. Now run the hot water full force in the basin and hold your face over the steam for a minute or two. Remove the excess cream with tissue and splash cold water over your face and neck to close the pores and give you a wide-awake look and feeling.

Mrs. Mesta and Margaret Both 'Women of the Year'

NEW YORK, Dec. 3 (AP).—Perle Mesta, Oklahoma-born "hostess with the mostest" who is now United States Minister to Luxembourg, is named 1950 "woman of the year" in the annual Associated Press poll of women's editors of United States newspapers.

Mrs. Mesta, famed as Washington's number one party-giver at the time of her appointment in 1949, has surprised critics by settling down to a serious job in her diplomatic post and winning the apparent respect and affection of the Luxembourgers.

The fact that the season's smash musical comedy hit on Broadway concerns the doings of a lady Ambassador, however, also has focused the spotlight of public interest on Mrs. Mesta.

This cause-and-effect is reflected in the editors' poll, which overwhelmingly names Ethel Merman, star of the musical "Call Me Madam," as the year's outstanding actress of the legitimate stage.

Mrs. Mesta

Miss Truman

Singled out in other fields by the poll were Margaret Truman, music; Gloria Swanson, cinema; Pearl Buck, literature; Dr. Irene Corey Diller, science; Gussie Moran, sports; Mary Margaret McBride, radio; Vivien Kellems, business; Millicent Carey McIntosh, dean of Barnard, education; Senator Margaret Chase Smith, politics and Faye Emerson, television. Miss Emerson was a write-in candidate, since there was no category for television on the ballot.

The Toy Box

Children Will Beam Over a Sundial Watch

By Alleis C. Wilson

WITH CHRISTMAS morning just three weeks away, the Christmas shopping crowds are getting larger. Toy departments and toy stores are entertaining more parents and their youngsters, and the lines of children waiting to talk to Santa are getting longer.

But despite this, the stock of toys is still large enough to tempt the children and help parents make their selections.

An eye-catching sundial watch should catch boys' and girls' imaginations as well. This watch does nine different things fairly successfully. The face of the "watch" has a miniature sundial and compass; the back contains the Morse code. A small magnifying glass and ball point pen (less than an inch long) pull out of the sides. It is a gadget that should appeal to children of the box-top age. The instructions make no provision for telling time when the sun does not shine on the dial. (Kann's—$1.98.)

IN CASE the railroads running around your Christmas tree needs an up-to-date touch of realism, the A. C. Gilbert Co. offers an illuminated roadside diner. Of course, this year's diner has a television antenna and small signs proclaiming "Television Every Nite" and "Booths for Ladies." (Lansburgh's — $4.25.)

A whole field of model trucks includes nearly every type of truck imaginable in perfect detail. These appeal particularly to older boys who appreciate scaled models. A handsome fire engine, about 2 feet long, has a telescope extension ladder and rear wheel steering apparatus. (The Hecht Co.—$21.95.) An authentic reproduction of a bucketloader is $11.95. (Woodward & Lothrop.) A cement mixer in this group will actually mix concrete and pour it. This rules this one out as a living room toy. (Play Center, Inc.—$10.95.) A large Mobilgas truck, bright red, is $9.95. (Lansburgh's.) A road grader, scaled down to model size, will scrape earth, carry the load and then dump. (F. A. O. Schwarz—$13.95.) A large moving van would satisfy any boy who loves to haul smaller objects around. (Kann's—$13.95.)

The toy departments now hold nearly enough doll bedding to open separate doll linens departments. A starter set for a doll bed or doll buggy includes a sheet, a pillow case and one blanket. (Neisner's—69 cents.) And for a fancy top covering for either carriage or cradle there are dainty carriage robes and pillow covers. A pale blue dimity set would be the pride of any doll. ($3.98.) Another set is available in either dotted swiss or organdy. ($2.98.) Both are at The Hecht Co. Bright plaid wool blankets will keep the doll warm in coldest weather. (Kann's—$1.47.)

Doll furniture is quite plentiful again this year. It is an easy matter to furnish a doll house as simply or as extravagantly as you wish. Boxes of plastic furniture cost about one dollar and are found in most five and tens and toy departments. More realistic rooms can be furnished with slightly more expensive boxes. (Lansburgh's — $1.95.) Furniture bought by the piece will add up to a much larger sum.

WOODWARD & LOTHROP have a counter full of little extras for very special doll houses. Some of these are: A pop-up toaster with toast (75 cents); a tiny kitchen mixer $1); a pup, complete with blanket, basket, dish of bones and dog food ($1); curtains (65 cents a pair); a luxurious bear rug ($1.25); tiny bed linens, including sheet, mattress, pillow, blanket and spread ($1); basket of fruit (35 cents); a glass coffee maker ($1.50); knitting basket (60 cents); and a Christmas tree, decorated, with gaily wrapped packages to spread beneath it ($1).

At F. A. O. Schwarz there are drapes (75 cents pair); a leather desk set ($1.50); and cups and saucers ($1). They also have a handsome breakfront at $7.50.

A novel idea in doll houses is a round one patterned after a modernistic house. It allows several children to enjoy playing with the doll house simultaneously without getting in each other's hair. (Play Center, Inc.—$14.95, unfurnished, or $19.95 with plastic furniture.)

If you haven't a copy of "A Visit From St. Nicholas," it isn't too early to get one. A little Golden Book (25 cents) is beautifully illustrated and available at most five and tens and book counters. Just watch the children glow when you begin to read, "'Twas the night before Christmas——."

Peruvian Embassy's Reception Draws Diplomats, Socialites

By Marie McNair

BUSY DAYS at Lake Success give United Nations representatives little time for leisure.

But Peru's Ambassador to U. N., Dr. Victor Andres Belaunde, managed a brief respite from his duties and with Senora de Belaunde spent the weekend in Washington. Yesterday they met a sizable cut from "old Washington" as well as a scattering of diplomats at a large reception given by the Peruvian Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer at the embassy.

Guests turning into the embassy driveway found their path lighted at intervals along the way. Inside to welcome them were the Ambassador and Senora de Berckemeyer, the senora in a ballerina black lace gown with wide neckline. Senora de Belaunde chose black lace too, and both ladies wore purple orchids tucked at the waist.

THE EMBASSY is stamped with the personality of its occupants—at once elegant and warm. Superb Madonnas by old masters hang in the drawing room with deep wine brocade draperies as a background. In the dining room there's a portrait of the Ambassador splendid in red and gold diplomatic uniform, and facing him, the Ambassadress in a soft red gown. And the paneled library is dominated by a Surbaran of a Benedictine monk, so rare that the Mellon Gallery, I've heard, has put in its bid.

Yesterday, with the air like spring, the bar had been set up on the canopied terrace with a buffet in the small room adjoining where prints and paintings of cock fights and bull fights line the walls. There was another larger table in the dining room and guests made their way between the two.

THE BRAZILIAN Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, was there and the Luxembourg Minister, Hugues Le Gallais, and Mme. LeGallais in ANOTHER Paullette hat, this of soft blue with matching front.

Saw the Chilean Ambassador Felix Nieto del Rio, and the Mexican Ambassador Rafael de la Colina sans wives; the Swedish Ambassador Erik Boheman with pretty Mme. Boheman, and the Dominican Ambassador, Dr. Luis Thomen, with his Senora.

Justice and Mrs. Harold Burton found friends at every step and it was "welcome home" for Mrs. Patrick Hurley, who's been at home in Santa Fe for too many months. Representative and Mrs. Ken Regan were seeing some of their friends for the first time since Congress recessed, returning by motor from Texas last Monday after almost five days in the Tennessee and Arkansas snow storm.

Representative and Mrs. Clark Thompson were also greeting friends and so were such favorites as the Leslie Biffles, Charles Ross of the White House secretariat and Mrs. Ross, Admiral and Mrs. Clark Woodward and Mrs. Mitchell Palmer—who looked like the original Merry Widow in her wide black tulle hat.

MME. MANGOR, wife of the Secretary of the Norwegian Embassy; Mrs. William MacCracken and Mrs. Carlton Holdredge all wore white satin hats. I learned that the Duchess of Windsor failed to come to Washington Saturday for the Dancing Class party because of the illness of "Aunt Bessie" Merryman, who went up from Washington to greet her niece when she landed from Europe last week.

Then, there were former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, the Secretary General of the Pan American Union and Senora de Lleras, Mrs. Wade Haislip, without the general; Fred Roy, Pendleton Turner, Mrs. Randall Hagner, Miss Carolyn Nash, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Constantine de Stackelberg and Mrs. de Stackelberg, with green paradise floating on her matching hat.

Mrs. Orme Wilson, not given to keeping up with the party pace, was there and still others were Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies, Mrs. Bradley Nash, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Thomas Bell Sweeney, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Lady Welch, Chief of Protocol and Mrs. John F. Simmons, Mrs. George Holmes, Mme. van Kaathoven, who is also difficult to lure out for cocktails; Mrs. George Thorpe, Miss Laura Tuckerman, George Williams, Marvin Braverman, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, Mrs. Thomas Cowell and Sidney Graves.

OUT THE MARYLAND way near Rockville, Mr. and Mrs. Newton Brewer entertained several hundred guests for cocktails yesterday at a housewarming at Newmar, their new home built just off the Georgetown Prep School golf course.

The house of rosy brick has a modified Georgian facade and a view from the picture windows in every room. There's a pond on the Brewer's expansive garden and half a dozen Mallards float on its surface.

TODAY'S "Washington Party" luncheon and fashion show put on by Austine and Helene Williams at the Shoreham, features "Men's Day."

Philippine Ambassador Joaquin Elizalde will be at the celebrity table, alone with Senator Russell Long, Clark Clifford, James Cromwell, Hawaiian Delegate Joseph Farrington, Frank Masche, John V. Horner, Royce Powell, Rudy Block and Marvin Braverman.

Mrs. Minnigerode Allen will have guests from the Naval Medical Center and Walter Reed Hospital. They'll be accompanied by Red Cross workers from both hospitals. Mrs. Eugene Rietzke will entertain 22 ladies for luncheon at the Washington Party in honor of Mrs. Eugene Cox, wife of the Representative from Georgia, who has just returned to town.

MRS. Helen Sparks gave a cocktail party Saturday for Mme. Vladimir Rybar.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Hill and their daughter, Cynthia; Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Kirke, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vennell, Mme. Espaillat, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Jones, Camille Chautemps, Maj. Kemp Slaughter, Mrs. Nathan Hurwitz, Mrs. Rowe Saltsman, Nicolas de Jelon and Mrs. George Grant.

Also Mme. Filipovic, wife of the Yugoslav Minister; and Vasilije Perendia, Second Secretary of the Yugoslav Embassy; Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Martin Heflin.

TRAVEL DEP'T:

MRS. Theodore J. Schulze will arrive today from England on board the Ile de France. Mrs Schulze is the daughter of Gen. W. Bedell Smith, former United States Ambassador to Moscow, and Mrs. Smith, now living in Washington.

Here's One Way to Get A Pie Crust You Can Tell From a Paper Plate

PIE WITH A CRUST that can't be told from the paper plate beneath it is an old joke, particularly with picnic-goers. But it's no joke if you're the one who made the pie with high hopes of perfection. Mrs. T. P. writes:

DEAR ANNE:

My custard pies always come out with a soggy crust. Can you tell me the reason and how to keep them crisp and flaky?

MRS. T. P., Washington

Pies baked in the crust are bound to be a bit soggy at the bottom, since the liquid soaks into the crust as it warms in the oven. If they have enough shortening and are baked properly, though, they are tender and good. It helps to start custard pie in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 15 minutes, then turn heat down to moderate (350 degrees) to finish baking.

Here's a trick, though, that will give you a crisp custard pie every time. Bake the crust and the pie separately! Pour custard directly into a well-greased pie pan. Set in shallow pan of hot water. Bake at 350 degrees 35 or 40 minutes, or until silver knife inserted in side of filling comes out clean. Center may still look soft but will set later. When lukewarm, loosen custard around edge of pan. Shake pan gently to loosen completely. Slip-slide custard into cool, baked pie shell which was made in exactly the same sized pan as the custard. Let settle before serving and custard will look as though it were baked in the crust.

DEAD ANNE:

When signing Christmas cards to friends, is it considered correct to sign only my husband's and my name to the cards or is it better taste to include the names of small children in our family? M. D., Washington

It depends largely on the recipient of the cards. There are no formal rules in this regard. If the cards are going to people who are not close friends and do not know your children, using only your husband's name and your own would be proper. For family friends, however, you may use the names of the entire family. Something like, "The Williamses—Fred, Mary, Betty, and Joe." would be appropriate. Or "The Fred Williamses—all Four."

DEAR ANNE:

Will you tell in your column whether you can dye an aqua colored dress aqua again—.. one that has turned a little brown under the arms? Or could it be dyed a warm brown successfully? R. E. D., Washington

Dyeing the dress a deeper aqua might make the underarm discoloration less noticeable, but I'm sure it would not hide it. A good deep brown is much more likely to cover the stain successfully.

DEAR ANNE:

Inclosed is a noted recipe for ice box rolls given me some years ago. It may be what P. L. M. has in mind, as it was credited to an electric refrigerator manufacturer.

Mrs. Ellen McIntire, 1884 Columbia rd., nw.

REFRIGERATOR ROLLS

1 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons fat
¼ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lukewarm water
1 yeast cake
4 cups flour, sifted
1 beaten egg

Soak yeast in lukewarm water. Add ½ teaspoon sugar. Put salt, fat, and sugar in bowl. Pour on boiling water. (I put mine in covered roasting pan.) Stir until well blended.

When cool, add dissolved yeast and beaten egg. Beat in flour, 2 cups first. Then work in the other 2 cups. Do not knead. Brush over with cold water to keep moist. Cover and place in refrigerator. Store in large container. To make rolls, cut off sufficient dough. Shape into rolls (use muffin tins.) Let rise until light. Grease tins. Let rise until double in size. Bake 15 to 20 minutes. Brush remaining dough with cold water. Keep in refrigerator.

Negro Pastor Assails Bias in White Church

STAFFORD, Conn., Dec. 3 (AP).—The white congregation of the Staffordville Congregational Church today greeted its new minister, the Rev. Roland T. Heacock, a Negro, without any fuss.

But the 56-year-old World War II chaplain, noting a number of strange faces, sermonized:

"It is a sad commentary on the state of democracy and Christianity that when an obscure, untalented Negro minister takes over the pastorate of a tiny rural Connecticut Church, it is big news. Why should it be big news?

"Why shouldn't we human beings just accept one another, regardless of the color of our skin or our eyes, if we are decent and worthy?

"And why, may I ask, is not the Christian religion in the forefront practicing this simple, elemental precept we so loudly proclaim the work and dignity of human personality?

"The plain truth is, and I take this opportunity of saying so, so that reporters may report it, the plain truth is that the Christian church should hang its head in shame at its snobbery, racism and class consciousness."

The pulpit was surrounded by vases of flowers and flags. The congregation looked on seriously as photographers took pictures of the minister, who for 17 years was pastor of a large Negro parish in Springfield, Mass., and served as interim minister recently at the nearby Stafford Springs Congregational Church.

Mr. Heacock's subject was "The Vision and the Answer."

Burma Reds Reported Ceding Area to China

RANGOON, Burma, Dec. 4 (AP).—The English-language newspaper Daily Gazette today said the Burmese Communists have agreed to cede North Burma territory to the Chinese Communists in return for military aid.

The Gazette said the agreement was negotiated by the White Flag (Stalinist) Communist chieftain, Thaxin Than Tun. There was no immediate government comment. The paper said the territory includes Kachin state, which the Chinese in 1947 unofficially claimed belonged to China.

Fires Kill 22; 2 Families Are Wiped Out

By The Associated Press

At least 22 persons lost their lives yesterday and two whole families were wiped out as a result of residential fires.

At Dillonvale, Ohio, a family of six, sleeping in their apartment over an inn, were killed by smoke from a blaze in the inn. The fire never reached the apartment.

John Gall, 39, proprietor of the inn, and his wife, Anna, 33, refused to jump from the second floor or toss their four children to neighbors.

At Osceola, Ark., the family of plantation-owner W. R. Dyess was wiped out by a fire in the apartment house where they had been living temporarily while their plantation home was being remodeled.

Dyess, his wife, their two children, and Don Blodgett, jr., who was spending the night with one of the Dyess boys, all were found burned to death in their beds.

At Portsmouth, R. I., George Brady, 72-year-old handyman was found dead after fire swept the garage apartment where he live alone.

An explosion in a kitchen oil stove at Fulton, N. Y., started a fire which took the life of Mrs. Elizabeth Irene Brown Everson, 42.

At Watertown, N. Y., Mrs. Bettie Peeler, 60, threw grease into a living room heater Saturday night, trying to build up a fire. She died yesterday of burns.

At Jacksonville, Fla., Mrs. Velma Henning, widow, was found dead in the ashes of her home.

At Emmitsburg, Md., Mrs. Grace Elizabeth Wills, 31, and her three small children burned to death in their log house after an oil stove exploded.

At Rochester, Mich., Mrs. Leola Blair, 47, gave her life in a vain attempt to rescue her two sons from their flame-swept home.

The body of the mother was found in the second floor bathroom of the frame home four miles west of here. The bodies of the sons, Carol, 13, and David, 11, were in their bedroom.

The fire started from an oil burner explosion. The mother dashed back into the flames after she had fled to safety.

Christmas Music Given By Chorus

By Paul Hume

The season's first Christmas music came to Constitution Hall yesterday afternoon.

The National Lutheran Chorus, directed by R. E. Snesrud, sang music drawn entirely from the rich literature of Advent and Christmas weeks. The chorus has been welded into a sensitive group of polished choristers during their recent years of hard work.

Their tone is clear, well balanced, and never forced. It does not reach much beyond a medium volume, but that is a relief compared to the extremes to which large choruses are often urged.

The traditional music arranged into a song of Christmas by Roy Ringwald opened the concert. Made popular by Fred Waring's great choral programs, this was well done, if a bit lacking in variety of color.

Bach's model of all Christmas chorales, Break Forth O Beauteous Heavenly Light, was welcome except for the strange rushing at the words, "power of Satan breaking." There is no need to hurry this phrase.

A Washington composer added a fine work to the otherwise expected program. Dorothy Radde Emery, in her 'So Dark the Night," has achieved a handsome effect from chorus and four trumpets. Her sense of good choral sound is especially fine in the first two verses. The final verse suffers from the weakness of the fugue subject and its inadequate treatment. Nor does the climax receive proper preparation. And still it is a convincing piece of music, highly welcome today and for years to come.

The balance of the program was given to carols, in three of which both chorus and audience sang.

Two Sought In Robbery Of Club Owner

Police broadcast an interstate lookout yesterday for two men who reportedly shot Rubye Haverman, 44, in his home at 5913 Riggs rd., Hyattsville, and robbed him of $2500 early in the morning.

Haverman, who operates the 4400 Club at 4400 Rhode Island ave., Hyattsville, was eating in the kitchen with his wife when the two men forced their way in the front door after Mrs. Haverman answered their knock, Hyattsville police said.

Hearing the disturbance, Haverman came from the kitchen and swung a riding stick at one of the men, according to police. The man then shot Haverman in the thigh, removed $2500 from his pocket. Then both men fled, according to police.

Although wounded, Haverman grabbed a gun, ran out on the front porch and fired several times at the back of the car in which the two men escaped, police said.

Haverman was admitted to Prince Georges County Hospital, where he was reported in good condition. He told police the two men were of Syrian or Italian descent and wore black snap-brimmed hats and grey topcoats. One was about 33 and the other about 38, he told police.

Fitzgerald's MSS Given To Princeton

Mrs. Samuel J. Lanahan of Chevy Chase, Md., daughter of the late F. Scott Fitzgerald, has presented the papers of the noted writer to Princeton University, it was announced yesterday. He was a member of the class of 1917.

Included are manuscripts and typescripts of Fitzgerald's novels and short stories; material relating to movie scripts prepared or revised by Fitzgerald, and his correspondence file containing letters from John Dos Passos, Edith Wharton, H. L. Mencken, T. S. Eliot and Ernest Hemingway.

Mrs. Lanahan, who lives at 6711 Brookville rd., also gave more than 600 books from Fitzgerald's library to Princeton.

Dr. Julian P. Boyd, university librarian, said the library "has accepted these manuscripts with a sense of the high trust involved."

Boyd expressed the hope that others who may have Fitzgerald letters, memorabilia and similar items would place originals or copies in the Princeton library so as to gather in one place a comprehensive collection.

Policemen were posted at each end of the speakers' table, and other detectives and patrolmen took up positions throughout the hotel ballroom and in the balcony overlooking it.

About 1200 guests were present for the affair.

No Fires Started

Bergen's Error Was To Put It on Film

By John Crosby

EDGAR BERGEN has been conscious of television perhaps longer than any major radio comedian, has been fiddling around with it experimentally for years and finally gave tongue on his first network show on C.B.S.-TV. It didn't set any brushfires in my neighborhood.

Crosby

Bergen defied the experience of others by putting his show on film. While this gave the program a flexibility he badly needed, it was gained at the expense of picture quality, which was poor even by film standards. My opinion of film or kinescope on TV has been low from the outset and it gets lower each time someone else tries it. If you can't see the guy, it doesn't much matter how good the jokes are. Bergen wasn't invisible exactly, just murky, disappearing from view only occasionally.

That puts a comedian under a severe handicap, as if we were watching him through binoculars in the middle of the night. I wasn't entirely happy about the format of the show, either. Bergen appeared at the opening in front of that inevitable curtain to trade badinage with the inevitable studio audience which mercifully he kept out of sight. In other words, no shots of men and women beating their plams together, otherwise known as the Ed Sullivan dissolve.

AFTER A MINUTE OR TWO of this, the curtain parted and we were in the Bergen-McCarthy home, examining the dust on Charlie's schoolbooks. I fail to understand this maneuver. The illusion of Bergen's home, so carefully preserved on his radio show, is destroyed when he steps in front of the curtain; then an attempt is made to re-create it. Burns and Allen are employing the same technique, if it can be graced by so formal a word, a marriage of radio and vaudeville with the shotgun held by a television camera.

Charlie McCarthy, the impudent little hedonist, is a triumph of wish-fulfillment, to lapse basely into psychiatric terminology. He says all the things the rest of us have on the tips of our tongues (or wish we had) and aren't quite bold enough to say. His attitude and his sharp tongue, I'm willing to bet, would never be accepted in a real live human comedian. (Appearances to the contrary, comedians are human, always excepting those who are suing me for $2,010,000, who are optimists.)

IN INVENTING CHARLIE, Bergen is resorting to the device Jonathan Swift used; a Lilliput or a Brobdignagian or a horse or a Charlie McCarthy can say things you and I can't get away with. This is a fine idea but, in recent years, Bergen has rather neglected the opportunity in favor of more conventional comedy—the kind you expect from human comedians and you know what kind that is. Charlie is as brash as ever ("Miles Standish went down in history"—"Well, I flunked it myself.") but I feel he'll be a good deal less convincing than he was on radio, where you couldn't see him.

Frankly I think any attempt to cling to the forms of radio while breasting the cameras is a mistake. The Bergen show seems to have one foot in each of three different media which is one foot too many even for so accomplished a ventriloquist.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Let's Face It; Traffic Is Here to Stay

"I like your column fine," writes a correspondent, "except when you discuss traffic matters. I don't drive a car and don't care much whether you have trouble parking or don't."

That's a perfectly understandable reaction. But the inescapable truth of the matter is that traffic problems affect us all, unless we never stir out of the house. They even affect pedestrians.

Here's an example. A little girl was killed by a school bus at St. John's Parochial School in Silver Spring just the other day. The child was walking over familiar ground; the bus was turning where it always turns.

Yet something went wrong, and the little girl is dead. A moving vehicle, as you can see, is a constant threat to pedestrians in the vicinity and even when all of us—driving and on foot—observe all the rules in the book, accidents still happen.

Mrs. James W. Eike of 3708 S. First rd., Arlington, Va., calls attention to another situation which is potentially dangerous.

At the St. Thomas More Parochial School, N. Thomas st., off Glebe blvd., in Arlington, Va., the Rev. Arthur J. Taylor sent out notices to all parents, asking them to use the outer parking lot only.

The object, of course, is to keep autos away from the front of the school, especially when many children are coming in or going out. Yet Mrs. Eike reports that some folks still seem to think they're "something special," because they insist on driving into the inner parking lot. And sometimes a delivery truck will make a path right through scores of children.

Our cities are getting more crowded, and these are problems we can't ignore. We're living closer to each other than we used to, and we'll just have to learn to respect each other's rights. Either that, or pay the price of selfishness.

YOUNGER GENERATION

Maybe I underestimated television's impact. If you don't own a set, you probably won't get the point of this story, but it's worth telling anyhow.

Mrs. Prentiss Willson, jr., of 2415 N. Military rd., Arlington,

Va., tells me that she was out riding with her 4-year-old son, Russell, the other day. As they neared the Capitol, the lad recognized the familiar dome and cried:

"Look, Mom, WNBW."

THESE CHANGING TIMES

Most of my schoolmates in college "worked." Not steadily, and certainly not full time.

But either we held down an odd job or two, or we spent our spare time looking for an odd job to hold down.

Most of us were glad to settle for free meals in exchange for waiting on table. Some — the elite — got part-time jobs clerking in campus stores or jerking sodas. For pay. Not much, but real money.

I was a financial tycoon. I edited a suburban newspaper. The $20 per week I was supposed to draw was just double what I was getting from home and, in the early 30's, considered quite a sum.

Unfortunately, the owner of the paper always greeted me on payday with a very sad story. We developed a standard procedure, and after a few weeks of practice could zip through it in nothing flat.

I'd tell him to skip the story, I had troubles of my own. He'd haul out a quart of whisky and swear that it represented all his assets at the moment. "Take it," he'd say, thrusting it at me. "I'll make out somehow."

Usually we settled for $10. Sometimes it was much less. And it was understood that if he really had no cash at all, I'd get the bottle.

Whisky, I found, is a "liquid" asset. I once traded an unopened quart for a $5.50 meal ticket with only one corner punched out of it.

Those were certainly the days.

I'm reminded of all this by a bit of information that has just crossed my desk.

Right down the street from our new Washington Post Building there's the Benjamin Franklin University, which teaches accounting and business administration and such.

For many years the Ben Franklin has maintained a placement division through which it has gotten jobs for its graduates. Sometimes, the placement bureau was even able to get jobs for students qualified to serve as junior accountants while still pursuing their studies.

Today, I find, the school can no longer meet the demand. For the first time in its history, it has more job offers than it can fill. Employers ask for graduates, settle for undergraduates, and pay big money for anything they get. Jobs at $60 a week go begging among the students; $100 is more like it.

It makes a fellow wonder who's waiting on table at the fraternity houses these days.

THE OTHER HALF

Rich people have their problems, too. I know a guy who is having an awful time making up his mind whether he should go to Florida now or wait until after Christmas.

Washington Has a Weary Look

By Drew Pearson

Sometimes I think Washington has a hard time catching its breath between wars . . . Around the corner from where I live is an old barracks, built to house northern nurses during the Civil War. Built hastily, it was to be torn down after the Civil War, but the city grew, housing space was scarce. It is still there, revamped, cut up into apartments . . . Down New York and Maryland avenues are other barracks-like buildings built during World War I, also to have been torn down afterward. Again the city grew, office space was scarce. The buildings are still there—ugly, cold in winter, hot in summer, the remnants of war . . . Behind the White House, along the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool, in Potomac Park are more temporary buildings built during World War II, again supposed to be torn down thereafter. They are still there, scarring the landscape like the scars of war . . . Now, with the news from Korea—more Government expansion, more broken homes, more ruined lives, more war.

Pearson

A Paradoxical Place

Washington is a paradoxical place in wartime. On the surface nobody is ruffled, nobody seems to give a hang . . . Harry Truman has about the same list of callers, many from Missouri—Judge Bennett Clark, formerly of St. Louis, Bill Boyle of Kansas City, Congressman Bolling of Kansas City, Douglas Fairbanks of Hollywood; Alaskan Delegate Bartlett, not of Kansas City; the Savings and Loan Association of Kansas City; his friend, Perle Mesta of Oklahoma and Luxembourg; John Bierwirth, who distills Old Grandad, Old Taylor, Mt. Vernon, Old Overholt and other noted whiskies; Dr. F. W. Olson of Kansas City, Mrs. India Edwards of the Democratic National Committee . . . General Bradley and the Joint Chiefs of Staff also call, but not as frequently as the folks from Kansas City . . . The President is a worried man, but outwardly he doesn't show it. . . He give the impression of a man who waits for problems to come to him, not one who reaches out to solve questions before they become problems.

F Street Club

Along sleepy F st.—not far from the White House, police banished cars and pedestrians. The President was dining out—at the 1925 F Street Club . . . Jokester George Allen was there, also "Call Me Madam" Perle Mesta; Senator Tydings, not glum over his defeat in Maryland; millionaire teetotaler Bob Kerr of Oklahoma, whose natural gas bill Truman vetoed; glamorous Madame Cafritz; Col. Bob Guggenheim; amiable Leslie Biffle . . . Songbird Rosalind Courtwright sang for the President, despite the fact that her pianist was belatedly barred by the Secret Service and sent back to New York. (His wife once wrote for the Daily Worker.) Eddie MacIntyre, pianist for NBC, had to pinch hit at the last minute, but the President helped out by playing the piano too . . . Folks lined F st. when the President went home at 11 p. m. During the long years of the Roosevelt administration the President didn't go out to dinner, so they were curious . . . Newsmen, also curious, also waited. One asked the President: "What do you think of the Korean situation?" "I don't think," he snapped, and entered his car.

Weary Secretary

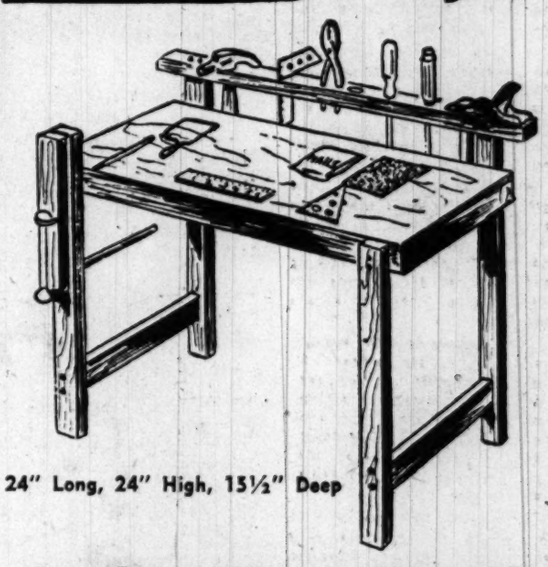

Flash bulbs clutter the carpets of the State Department. Klieg lights, newsreel cameras are focused on a desk in front of Dean Acheson's office. He is making a speech . . . The Secretary of State looks tired, discouraged, his voice sounds beaten. The pep is gone. He reads the lines, but there is no oomph behind the words . . . Before making the speech he has to stage a dress rehearsal for the newsreels, for the stills, then for the radio . . . Previously Acheson appeared privately before Senate solons—like a professor before a blackboard. Meticulous, patient, almost too precise, he explained: "There is a good deal of evidence that the main target of Soviet domination is still Europe. The intention may be to so divert and weaken the U. N. forces in Korea that the strengthening of the Atlantic Pact nations may be neglected. If that is allowed to occur, then Cominform armies may overrun Europe." . . . Senator "Long Tom" Connally of Texas let his cigar go out . . . Wisconsin's Alex Wiley chewed his nervously without lighting it.

Words of Courage

General George Marshall, talked in serious tones before the Women's Press Club . . . In guarded words—because one general doesn't criticize another—he gave a hint of what he thought of MacArthur's intelligence. "This great aggressor action," he said referring to Chinese attacks, "because of the preparation that would have to be gone through to get such a force and deploy it—makes it evident that it has been long prepared and long intended." . . . But General Marshall, old as he is, tired as he must be, had some words of encouragement. He paid tribute to the American people, their courage, their understanding, their ability to work together. "When the Nazis were at our door," he said, "the situation was saved by one thing—the reaction of the American people."
